Mitchell Hamline Law Review

Table of Contents

1. Orientation

1.1 Welcome ........................................................................................................... 1
1.2 Competition Timeline ....................................................................................... 2
1.3 Honor Pledge .................................................................................................... 3
1.4 Honor Code and Eligibility .............................................................................. 4
1.5 Competition Checklist ...................................................................................... 5

2. Tasks

2.1 Bluebook Quiz ................................................................................................. 6
2.2 Selected Bluebook Rules ............................................................................... 7
2.3 What is a Case Note? ......................................................................................... 15
2.4 The Method of Law Review Writing .................................................................. 16
2.5 Technical Requirements for the Case Note ...................................................... 21
2.6 Case Note Parameters ...................................................................................... 23
2.7 Case Note Scoring Rubric .................................................................................. 24

3. Tools

3.1 Case Note Strategies ........................................................................................ 26
3.2 Punctuation and Style ..................................................................................... 28
3.3 Microsoft Shortcuts .......................................................................................... 33
3.4 Sample Case Note 1 ......................................................................................... 36
3.5 Sample Case Note 2 ......................................................................................... 56
WELCOME

May 18, 2016

Dear Write-On Competition Participants:

The Mitchell Hamline Law Review Editorial Board welcomes you to the write-on competition. To facilitate your participation, we have prepared this handbook for you. The enclosed materials provide important information you will need during the competition.

The write-on competition consists of two tasks designed to evaluate your ability to think and write like a member of the Law Review. The Bluebook quiz contains fifty consecutive endnote citations. You must correct each endnote according to the twentieth edition of The Bluebook and the sixteenth edition of The Chicago Manual of Style. The paper that you are required to write is called a case note. Your case note must have at least eight pages of text and eight pages of endnotes, and it must not exceed twenty pages. You have three weeks to complete both tasks. If you are worried about the time commitment, keep in mind that many successful candidates have taken summer classes, worked full-time, and studied abroad while participating in the write-on competition.

You may direct any questions you may have about the write-on competition to this year’s Notes & Comments Editor, Christian Barnes, at christian.barnes@mitchellhamline.edu. Christian can provide general guidance on competition procedural issues, but will not answer substantive questions. You may not submit written portions of your case note to Christian.

The write-on process is competitive. Case notes are evaluated in relation to other submissions from the same category. Participants who receive the highest combined score for their case note and Bluebook quiz are invited to join the Mitchell Hamline Law Review.

Participants are evaluated on the quality of their write-on material alone. To ensure that submissions are evaluated consistently, we have established an anonymous grading system with uniform criteria. Please see the case note rubric below.

Remember there are many benefits associated with Law Review membership. As an Associate, you will develop excellent legal research, writing, and editing skills. You will also write an article that will fulfill the long paper requirement and, if written during the fall semester, will be considered for publication in the Mitchell Hamline Law Review. Moreover, you will earn academic credit for your contributions to the journal. Finally, many employers consider law review experience to be an important, if not requisite, qualification in hiring.

Thank you for your interest in the Mitchell Hamline Law Review. We have a great year ahead, and we hope that you will join us.

Sincerely,

Editorial Board of Volume 43 of the Mitchell Hamline Law Review
COMPETITION TIMELINE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Wednesday, May 18 at 5:00pm   | Competition Begins
  Download competition materials from the Law Review website.
  Receive your anonymous write-on ID via email from eic.lawreview@mitchellhamline.edu. |
| Thursday, May 19 – Wednesday, June 8 | Competition Period
  During this period, participants may e-mail procedural questions to Notes & Comments Editor Christian Barnes. Substantive questions will NOT be answered. The Notes & Comments Editor will respond to questions within 24 hours. The Notes & Comments Editor is not required to respond to questions sent after Wednesday, June 8th. |
| Wednesday, June 8 at 8:00pm   | Competition Ends
  All case notes and Bluebook quizzes are due by 8:00 p.m. A case note or Bluebook quiz turned in at 8:01 p.m. or later will NOT be accepted. NO EXCEPTIONS.

  Electronic Submissions
  Write-on participants must submit:
  (1) an electronic copy of their completed case note in endnote format;
  (2) an electronic copy of their completed case note in footnote format;
  (3) an electronic copy of their completed Bluebook quiz; and
  (4) a signed copy of the Honor Pledge (see next page for template) by e-mail to eic.lawreview@mitchellhamline.edu by 8:00 p.m. on June 8th.

  AGAIN, LATE SUBMISSIONS WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED.
  EARLY SUBMISSIONS ARE WELCOME.

  Note: Student Services and the Registrar cannot answer any questions about submissions, the Law Review, or the write-on process. |
| Late June/Early July          | Announcement of those selected as associates for the Mitchell Hamline Law Review. |
HONOR PLEDGE

I pledge that I have complied with the rules stated in the Write-On Competition Handbook.

I pledge that I have complied with Mitchell Hamline Student Code of Conduct (as indicated in the Write-On Handbook’s HONOR CODE AND ELIGIBILITY section) which prohibits conduct that tends to give an unfair advantage to any student in an academic affair, and that I have not violated the rules of the Mitchell Hamline Law Review Write-On Competition so as to give myself or anyone else an unfair advantage.

I pledge that the work I have submitted is my own and that I have not wrongfully copied or paraphrased another’s expressions or ideas without proper attribution.

Signed: __________________________ Date: __________________________

PRINT Name: __________________________

Address: __________________________

City, State, Zip: __________________________

Telephone: __________________________

PLEASE ALSO INDICATE:

Case Note Topic: __________________________

Write-on ID: __________________________

Year in school: __________________________

If you have just completed the first year of a three-year program, please put 2L.
If you have just completed the first year of a four-year program, please put 1L.
If you have just completed the second year of a three-year program, please put 3L.
If you have just completed the second year of a four-year program, please put 2L.
If you have just completed the third year of the four-year program, please put 4L.
If you are a hybrid student in cohort one or two, please put Hybrid.

(NOTE: This will not be viewed by those scoring your case note)

* PRINT, SIGN, SCAN, AND THEN ATTACH THIS DOCUMENT TO YOUR SUBMISSION EMAIL. ***
HONOR CODE AND ELIGIBILITY

ELIGIBILITY

Students who have completed two semesters of law school and have at least two semesters remaining at Mitchell Hamline School of Law are eligible for the 2016–2017 Mitchell Hamline Law Review write-on competition. Applicants who have been sanctioned by any law school for plagiarism are not eligible to participate in the write-on competition.

HONOR CODES

Write-on participants must comply with Mitchell Hamline School of Law’s Student Code of Conduct throughout the competition. All submissions must be the exclusive work of the write-on participant. Write-on participants shall not receive outside writing or editorial assistance. Write-on participants may refer to legal texts, treatises, or style guides provided that the material does not give the participant an unfair advantage. Write-on participants cannot seek assistance, discuss their topic, or show their work to anyone, excepted as permitted by the Write-On Competition Handbook. Any write-on participant who violates the Code of Conduct or the Write-On Competition Handbook rules will be disqualified from the competition and reported to administration. Plagiarism will not be tolerated.

- The Mitchell Hamline Student Code of Conduct is found in Chapter 2 of the Mitchell Hamline Student Handbook and is available at http://mitchellhamline.edu/students/student-handbook/
COMPETITION CHECKLIST

BY 8PM WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 2016:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>I have carefully reviewed the deadlines.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I have reviewed the Write-On Competition Handbook.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I have communicated any questions to the Notes &amp; Comments Editor.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I have reviewed my case note for compliance with the guidelines specified in this packet.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I have signed the Honor Pledge and scanned an electronic version to my computer.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I have an electronic copy of my case note to submit with citations appearing as footnotes.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I have an electronic copy of my case note to submit with citations appearing as endnotes.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I have put my write-on ID on each page of my case note (both electronic copies)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I am e-mailing electronic copies of: my Bluebook quiz, my case note with endnotes, and my case note with footnotes, each as a separate Word document, and my signed honor pledge scanned as a PDF, to eic.lawreview@mitchellhamline.edu, by Wednesday, June 8 at 8:00 p.m. NO EXCEPTIONS.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I understand that if I turn in any materials (case notes, Bluebook quiz, or Honor Pledge) at 8:01p.m. or later on Wednesday, June 8, I will be disqualified from the write-on competition.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

☑
The Bluebook quiz comprises 50 endnotes that must be corrected according to the relevant rules in the 20th edition of the Bluebook. Simply correct each endnote. Do not highlight your changes, or use the “track changes” feature. Some endnotes may have no errors; others may contain several. It is your job to determine what errors exist, and how they should best be corrected.

There are some ambiguities in the Bluebook. You must work around these ambiguities based on your understanding of the relevant rule(s) and the Bluebook as a whole.

While the Bluebook quiz must be submitted electronically, you may find it helpful to print the document and make corrections on the printed copy. After making all corrections in the digital copy, you will submit this document to eic.lawreview@mitchellhamline.edu so that it is received no later than 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday, June 8, 2016. NO EXCEPTIONS.

For further information on how to complete and submit this required document, please see the Bluebook quiz document.
SELECTED BLUEBOOK RULES

The following list is provided as a reminder of some important elements of a citation. However, this list is not exhaustive. Always consult the rule in the Bluebook.

The Mitchell Hamline Law Review has adopted some special citation rules in addition to those in the Bluebook. Rules that override the Bluebook are in boxes.

1. TYPEFACE
   - Typeface conventions are the same as those in the Bluebook, Rule 2.1. Thus, anything that the Bluebook requires in italics must be italicized; anything that the Bluebook requires in small capitals must be in SMALL CAPS.
   - How do I make small capitals in MS Word?
     - To turn plain text into small capitals, use the shortcut CTRL+SHIFT+K (Mac: COMMAND+SHIFT+K) before you begin typing the text you want small-capped. Then, type the text you want small-capped, and then use the shortcut again to go back to plain text. Alternatively, you can select the text you want small-capped, and then use the shortcut CTRL+SHIFT+K (Mac: COMMAND+SHIFT+K) to change it to small caps.

2. USE OF ID.
   - Id. is used to cite to the preceding authority, either within the same endnote/footnote or the immediately preceding endnote/footnote. Id. may only be used to cite to a previous endnote/footnote if that endnote/footnote contains only one authority. See Rule 4.1.

3. SIGNALS
   - Rule 1.2 covers signals. Become familiar with the specific usage for each signal.
   - All signals should be italicized unless they are used as verbs in ordinary textual sentences. See Rule 1.2(e).
   - When using more than one signal in a single endnote/footnote, the order of signals is covered by Rule 1.3. Note that Rule 1.2 identifies four types of signals: supportive, comparative, contradictory, or background. Signals of the same basic type must be strung together within a single citation sentence and must be separated by semicolons. If an endnote contains signals of different types, then they must be placed in separate citation sentences.
   - If you use see also, cf., or see generally, then a parenthetical is strongly recommended. Rule 1.5 covers this type of parenthetical.
4. CASE NAMES

a. Typeface

- If a case name is cited in full in an endnote/footnote, then the case name should not be italicized. Case names appearing in a textual sentence, whether in the body of the text or in an endnote, should be italicized. See Rules 2.1(a) and 2.2.
- In a short cite, the case name should be italicized.
- Procedural phrases such as In re and ex rel. should be italicized, regardless of whether the entire case name is italicized.

b. Party Names

- Verify the spelling of all case names.
- Use abbreviations where appropriate. See Rule 10.2.2 and Table 6. If a case name appears in a textual sentence, do not use abbreviations unless permitted by Rule 10.2.1(c).

5. CASE CITATION

- Rule 10 generally covers case citations.
- Jurisdiction-specific citation is further covered in Table 1. Note that if a state is included in the reporter name, then the court of decision is not included with the date.

  For example: 123 Cal. Rptr. 23 (1998), not 123 Cal. Rptr. 23 (Cal. 1998)
- If a U.S. Supreme Court decision is published and available in U.S. Reports, then the case should be cited to the U.S. Reporter, and not to the Supreme Court Reporter.

PARALLEL CITATION

Contrary to Rule 10.3.1(b), parallel cites are required for Minnesota cases that appear in both the North Western Reporter and Minnesota Reports. This rule applies to Minnesota cases published before 1978. The use of these parallel cites is a courtesy to Minnesota practitioners.

For example: Vikings v. Packers, 123 Minn. 456, 460, 987 N.W.2d 654, 660 (1971).
PUBLIC DOMAIN CITATION FORMAT

Contrary to Table 1 and Wisconsin Supreme Court Rule 80.02, subdiv. 2, citations to Wisconsin cases shall include public domain, Wisconsin Reports, and North Western Reporter information each time a full citation is appropriate. When a short form citation is appropriate, provide only public domain information, followed by “at ¶ [#].”

Full citation with pincite:   State v. Pepper, 2001 WI 19, ¶ 4, 568 Wis. 2d 234, 234 N.W.2d 543.

Short form citations:   Pepper, 2001 WI 19 at ¶ 3.
                      Id. at ¶ 6.

The Bluebook and Wisconsin Supreme Court Rule 80 do not provide guidance for formatting prior/subsequent history of Wisconsin cases decided after December 31, 1999. When such information is appropriate, use public domain information for prior/subsequent history.

Subsequent history with pincite:
State v. Pepper, 2000 WI App 10, ¶ 21, 283 Wis. 2d 123, 143 N.W.2d 321, aff’d, 2001 WI 19.

6. SHORT FORMS FOR CASES

• Rule 10.9(a): In law review footnotes, a short form for a case may be used if it clearly identifies a case that (1) is already cited in the same footnote or (2) is cited (in either full or short form, including “id.”) in one of the preceding five footnotes. This applies to statutes as well.

• Supra and [hereinafter] should not be used to cite cases, except in extraordinary circumstances. See Rule 4.2.

7. PRIOR AND SUBSEQUENT HISTORY OF CASES

• Rule 10.7 governs what procedural information should be included with case citations. Generally, if a case is cited in full, include all subsequent history except for denials of rehearing, history on remand, and certain denials of certiorari.
8. STATUTES

- When citing statutes, see Rule 12 and Table 1.
- When citing Minnesota statutes, be sure to cite to Minnesota Statutes, not Minnesota Statutes Annotated. Similarly, when citing federal laws, cite to United States Code; do not cite to U.S.C.S. or U.S.C.A. unless absolutely necessary.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>FEDERAL AND MINNESOTA STATUTES</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Always cite to the print reporter for Federal and Minnesota statutes. When citing a state statute for a state other than Minnesota, cite to the statute on Westlaw.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For example: MINN. STAT. § 123.06 (2012).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WIS. STAT. ANN § 19.43 (West, Westlaw through 1995 Act 26).</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

- The date for a statutory volume should be the date of the main volume. Do not include the date of the supplement unless the statute is found or amended therein.

  For example:

  (1994) The statute is found in the main volume.
  (Supp. 2000) The statute is only found in the supplement.

- Supra and [hereinafter] should not be used to cite statutes or constitutions, except in extraordinary circumstances. See Rule 4.2.

9. PINPOINT CITES (PINCITES)

- Pincites are required when citing to a proposition in the text of the source.
- For cases, a pincite should refer to the text of the case, not to the headnotes or syllabus. In the Bluebook, the rule for how to create a pincite for a particular source is usually included in the general discussion of that source.
- A pincite is required even if the authority is on the first page of the source.

  For example: 11 HARV. L. REV. 123, 123 (1901).

10. PARENTHETICALS

- Use parentheticals to explain the proposition in the main text. For some introductory signals, use of a parenthetical is strongly recommended. See Rule 1.2.
- Most parentheticals should start with a present participle (a verb ending in “ing” such as “holding” or “discussing”). However, if a parenthetical quotes one or more full sentences, or if a full participial phrase is unnecessary, then no present participle is required. See Rule 1.5.
11. ORDER OF AUTHORITIES

- In a single citation sentence, authorities are ordered according to Rule 1.4.
- For primary authority, constitutions and statutes come first, followed by case law. Higher jurisdictions are generally cited before lower jurisdictions. Within courts of the same jurisdiction, cases are cited in reverse chronological order.
- Secondary authority follows primary authority. Note that some forms of secondary authority, especially law review articles, are in alphabetical order rather than reverse chronological order. Also note that student-written law review articles are ordered separately from other law review articles.

For example:

12. QUOTATIONS

- For quotations of fifty or more words, see Rule 5.1(a). The quotation must be blocked, with margins set in on both the left and the right, and it should be single-spaced. Quotation marks are not placed at the beginning or end of the quotation. Any quotation marks within the quotation should appear as they do in the original.
- For quotations of fewer than fifty words, see Rule 5.1(b). The quotation should be placed in quotation marks. Quotation marks within the quotation are replaced by single quotation marks.
- See Rule 5.2 for the use of brackets and “[sic]” when altering the original text.
- See Rule 5.3 for the use of ellipses when omitting words.

13. BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, AND OTHER NONPERIODIC MATERIALS

- Refer generally to Rule 15.
- When citing to a publication with two authors, separate the authors’ names with an ampersand in the order listed on the publication. When citing to a publication with more than two authors, cite the first author’s name followed by “et al.” unless including all the authors would be particularly relevant. See Rule 15.1.
- Always give the full name of an editor and/or translator followed by “ed.” or “trans.” in a parenthetical. Rules 15.1 and 15.4.

For example:

- For special citation forms (including frequently cited works), refer to Rule 15.8.
14. PERIODICAL MATERIALS

- When citing periodical materials use LARGE AND SMALL CAPS for the name of the publication only. The author’s name must be in ordinary Roman type and the title of the article must be in italics. Refer generally to Rule 16 for a breakdown of periodical citations and examples. Note the slight differences in consecutively and non-consecutively paginated journals.

- Refer to Rule 16.6 for additions to the general rules when citing to sections and page numbers of newspapers.

15. COMMERCIAL DATABASES AND THE INTERNET

- Cite to the traditional print source if it is available. If the traditional print source is hard to locate or citing to an electronic source would improve access to the information, cite to the traditional print source first, and also provide a parallel citation to the electronic source.

- Parallel Citations:
  - Use “available at” when a traditional source is available but the content of the Internet source is identical to the print source and the Internet citation will substantially improve access to the source.

- Cite directly to the electronic source if it does not exist in print or if the print version is so obscure that it is practically unavailable.

- Date of Internet Citation:
  - See Rule 18.2.2(c).
  - If a citation includes both a traditional source and a parallel Internet source, provide the date for the traditional source according to the applicable rule.
  - If a citation is only to an Internet source, a date must be provided. The date provided should be one of the following, in order of preference:
    - the date of the case, statute, article, or other material as specified in the information itself;
    - the date the Internet site was last visited to confirm the presence and location of the information.

For example:

- Preservation of Information:
  - An accurate URL does not guarantee that the user can readily access the information. For this reason, downloading, printing, or otherwise preserving the information, as it exists at the time of access, is encouraged.

16. NUMBERS AND SIGNS

- See Rule 6.2
- Text:
  - Spell out the numbers zero to ninety-nine in text, footnotes, and endnotes. For larger numbers, use numerals.
  - See exceptions in Rule 6.2.
- Section Symbol - §
  - Endnotes - Use of § permitted.
    - Do not use “§” at the beginning of a sentence. Spell out the word “Section.”
    - When the symbol is used, there should be a space between the symbol and the numeral.
  - Text - Use of § not permitted.
    - Always spell out the word “section.” Only capitalize if at the beginning of a sentence.
    - Exception: when referring to a section of the U.S. Code or a federal regulation, use the § symbol.

17. CAPITALIZATION OF COURT NAMES

- See Rule 8.
- State Court
  - A state court name should only be capitalized if it appears with a state name.
  - Examples:
    - the Minnesota Supreme Court
    - the Minnesota Court of Appeals
  - Always capitalize the United States Supreme Court. When reference is made to the United States Supreme Court, always capitalize “Supreme” and “Court.”
18. INTERNAL CROSS REFERENCES

- Rule 3.5 covers internal cross-reference.
  - Use “supra” to refer back to material that has already appeared within the piece when id. is not appropriate.
  - Use “infra” to refer to material that appears later in the piece.
  - Note that “supra” is also used in short form citations for certain types of sources (see Rule 4.2).

  - For example:

    - See supra text accompanying notes 23–24.
      - (referring the above the line text)
    - See supra note 15 and accompanying text.
      - (referring to the below the line text found in the footnote)
    - See infra Part II.
      - (referring to an entire section that is later in the article)

- Rule 4.2 covers “supra” and “hereinafter.”

  - Note that “supra” and “hereinafter” should not be used to refer to cases, statutes, constitutions, legislative materials (other than hearings), restatements, model codes, or regulations, except when the name of the authority is extremely long.
WHAT IS A CASE NOTE?

The three forms of legal articles traditionally found in law reviews are: (1) the Comment; (2) the Note; and (3) the Case Note. Participants in the Mitchell Hamline Law Review Write-On Competition must write a case note; each participant will be assigned a specific case.

The case note is a piece of writing that focuses on the significance of a single case. It is an in-depth analysis of the issues raised in the opinion. The writer should:

- dissect the case, the court’s reasoning, and policy justifications;
- fit the case into the fabric of principles of law and precedent;
- consider how the court’s analysis will raise issues for future cases; and
- critique the court’s analysis or offer an alternative analysis.

The author’s case note analysis may agree or disagree with the court’s approach and/or holding. In this sense, writing a case note is an opportunity to speak your point of view about a very specific area of law relative to the case about which you are writing. Portions of the case note will reflect on implications of the case in a larger sense. However, the case note should generally remain focused on the particular case. The case note follows a fairly standard format:

1. Table of contents (not included in page count)
2. Introduction (included in the page count, and it should start on a new page)
3. History of the relevant law
4. Facts of the case
5. Statement of the court’s analysis and holding
6. Analysis
7. Conclusion

The purpose of a case note is to highlight recent developments in the law. Thus, significant, controversial, and interesting cases are particularly excellent candidates for a case note analysis.

Two sample case notes are included in this packet. These particular case notes were successful in the write-on competition, and the authors were also selected for publication. While these case notes are excellent examples, please note that the endnotes have not been corrected for any citation errors—they are in their original submission form. Additionally, note that these submissions required two spaces after a period. The 2016–2017 Write-On Competition requires only one space. Always go to the Bluebook for citation!

To review other examples, see published case notes in previous issues of the Law Review (http://mitchellhamline.edu/law-review/). Note, however, that these examples are much longer than the case note required for the write-on competition. The write-on competition requires at least eight pages of text and eight pages of endnotes, with no more than twenty pages altogether.
THE METHOD OF LAW REVIEW WRITING

I. GENERAL COMMENTS

The technique of law review writing is unique. Each sentence should be carefully written, with attention paid to draftsmanship, research, and accuracy of expression. This is particularly true concerning statements of law, analysis, and opinion.

Statements not reflecting the author’s original idea or opinion must be cited. This is necessary both to avoid plagiarism and to increase the author’s credibility. Often a statement will require several footnotes within a particular sentence. Legal writing does not involve merely collecting and discussing cases or gathering quotations. It is important for the writer to set out in the text of the article the relationship between the authorities. Examination of the authorities requires that they be compared, reconciled, and analyzed.

Clarity and organization are of primary importance. Each sentence and paragraph should naturally follow the preceding sentence. Statements of fact should be brief and concise but should not leave out any significant fact. The writer should write with enough clarity that a beginning law student could understand the article, but also in an interesting and learned manner so that the most noted legal scholar would respect the work and appreciate the significance of what is said.

Text that is a close paraphrase of another source should be changed to an exact quote and properly cited. That being said, writers should avoid the common tendency to overuse quotations. The desired point can usually be stated more succinctly through your own careful choice of words. When a quotation is used, it is more commonly confined to footnotes. Occasionally, however, quotations are placed in the text of an article to illustrate the court’s point of view.

Quotations in the text may also be used if the court has summed up by way of dictum the author’s conclusions on a point of view. That is, you may prefer to use the words of the court rather than your own, but whenever the language of the court is set out as an accurate statement of the law, it should be supported by independent authorities.

For example, consider this sentence: “The rule was well stated in the case of X v. Y in which the court said ‘- - - - - - - -.’” This requires a footnote setting out the page(s) in X v. Y at which the dictum appears. This requirement is obvious, but preferably such a statement should also be accompanied by a footnote containing an independent citation of authority supporting the statement that this is an accurate recitation of the law. That is necessary because the dictum has been set out to represent the status of the law rather than merely to represent the attitude of a particular court in a particular case.

When stating your own opinions, criticisms, or conclusions without support of direct authority, ensure the statement reads as such and is not misleading. It is important to distinguish personal opinions, based on the author’s study of legal materials, from attempts to collect and objectively put together cases. Statements of opinion should be accompanied by a “see” footnote, showing cases on which the author’s opinion is based and possibly giving an explanation of this opinion.
The “History of the relevant law” section should be a complete story of the issue that is the subject of the note. There is a tendency to write this section like the statement of the rule in an office memo. Instead, this section should read as if a historian wrote it. It should begin at the first recorded statement by a court or legislature, chronicle the law’s evolution, and conclude with the present rule of law. Try to think of this section as a moving picture of this area of the law, organized in chronological order, rather than a snapshot of the law as it is today (or the day before your case was decided, if you are writing a case note). For a good example of this, see Mary Maloney-Huss, Case Note, Eighth Circuit Extends McCarran-Ferguson to Shield Alleged Monopolization of the Health Insurance Industry from Antitrust Scrutiny, 15 WM. MITCHELL L. REV. 713, 714–16 (1989) (discussing evolution from the fourteenth century to the twentieth century and containing no apology for its long title).

Also, the “History of the relevant law” section should move from the general to the specific. For example, if you are writing on the standard of judicial review for administrative agencies’ fact-finding in formal adjudication, you might start with the general purpose of the Administrative Procedure Act, then focus on judicial review, and finish with judicial review as it specifically applies to formal adjudication. Sometimes an article concerns the intersection of two different areas of the law. In that case, you must trace the path of both laws separately and then combine them at the end of the section.

II. PROPER USE OF AUTHORITY

An important aspect of writing the first draft is the correct use of supporting authority. This is accomplished by utilizing citations. Care must be taken, however, to be sure the authority cited does in fact support the textual statement. More specifically, before using a case as authority, a writer must distinguish a court’s holding from its dictum; the writer must distinguish what a court does from what it says, and sometimes, from what it says it is doing. The holding is generally considered an appellate court’s disposition of issues presented in appealing the conduct or procedure of the lower court. It includes essential reasons supporting the ruling on each issue. A gratuitous or preliminary statement of law in a case would merely be dictum. Often there will be difficult problems in deciding which label is appropriate, but the following illustrations may be helpful:

A. The trial court makes rulings A, B, and C. The appellate court states that A, B, and C are all correct and affirms. The case may be cited as finding for A, B, and C.

B. The trial court makes ruling A. The appellate court states that A was erroneous and that the ruling should have been B instead. The case may be cited as holding that A is erroneous, and as holding that B is correct, so far as B is clearly contrary to A. If, however, B goes beyond this and covers areas not included in A as well, then it is best to cite it as dictum. This calls for the use of individual judgment.

C. The court states that A is the general rule, but that it is not applicable to the facts before it. The case may be cited as dictum for general rule A.

D. The court modifies a judgment and affirms the judgment as modified. The case may be cited as holding for both the portion of the judgment that is affirmed and the portion that is modified.
E. The attorneys arguing the case assign errors or raise points that the court neither considers nor acts upon. Do not cite the case as either holding or dictum. Instead, merely explain what happened. For example, “In Jones v. Smith, counsel contended that . . . , but the court apparently . . . .”

F. The dissenting opinion raises a point that the majority did not express, but which it must have necessarily rejected in order to reach its conclusion. Do not cite the case as either holding or dictum, but merely explain what happened. For example, “In Jones v. Smith, the dissent contended . . . , but the majority apparently . . . .”

G. Another extremely important aspect of the correct use of supporting authority is the assurance that the authority is still good authority. To this end, every decision and statute cited must be carefully Shepardized through Westlaw, Lexis, or the latest paper supplement before being used as authority. Be certain that no case has been reversed, overruled, or so distinguished as to substantially destroy its value as an authority. Subsequent history of a case such as cert. denied, etc., must be included as part of the citation. See Bluebook Rule 10.7 for detailed rules on citing subsequent history.

III. AMOUNT OF AUTHORITY

The question always arises as to the amount of authority that is necessary to support a proposition in the text of an article. This question is not easily answered. The decision basically involves the discretion of the writer and will depend to a great extent on the quality of the authorities cited. For example, if you can cite a recent United States Supreme Court decision that is clearly controlling as to a point of law cited in the text, this decision alone can probably support the statement and represents a satisfactory citation of authority. On the other hand, it may be equally desirable not only to set out authority necessary to support a statement made in the text, but also to provide a number of additional primary and secondary authorities as an aid to research for readers who may be interested in following up the proposition stated.

Where the authorities cited in support of a proposition are of a lesser quality, there will generally be a need, if possible, to cite several cases in support of the statement. Where there is abundant authority that casts some doubt on the proposition, it is advisable to cite sufficient authority so that both sides of the issue can be thoroughly examined. Some articles place specific emphasis on consideration of the law in Minnesota. Even where this is not the object of the author's treatment of the subject, it is generally considered preferable to include among the authorities some Minnesota cases or discussions of Minnesota law so that the Minnesota position is at least indicated by implication. In some situations, a separate paragraph in a footnote may be devoted to discussion of the Minnesota position in regard to a matter taken up in the text or for which the footnote provides authority.

The writer should be careful not to overlook the use of secondary authorities, particularly where only a limited amount of space is devoted to discussion of a preliminary or related point in the article. This provides an opportunity for the reader to obtain a more detailed discussion and a more extensive collection of authorities, even though it would not be practical to thoroughly treat the matter in the article itself. Secondary authority is generally not sufficiently precise and does not purport to present an accurate treatment of the law. Annotations, such as A.L.R.s, may be used as collateral citations, along with the state and regional report citations, if the entire case has been reported and annotated.

IV. USE OF FOOTNOTES/ENDNOTES

Endnotes/footnotes serve several purposes. An endnote/footnote may contain any or all of the following:

A. Citation and discussion of authorities supporting the statement in the text. This will always come first in a footnote containing both citation of authority and discussion of collateral matters.

B. Explanation of the rationale of a statement of law contained in the text. Often this reasoning will be placed in the text, but the writer may find it more appropriate to place it in an endnote/footnote instead.

C. Historical review or background of a point of law, a statement contained in the text, or other matters of law or analysis which may be useful in explaining the text material.

D. Various analyses of or questions regarding the authorities, rules of law, or reasoning of the court with regard to the rule set out in the text.

E. Collateral matters may be discussed or alluded to with citation to sources containing a lengthy treatment of the subject. It may be desirable to present a brief discussion of these matters and then provide further citations so that someone interested in the matter can follow it.

Remember that endnotes/footnotes are not just places to catch all extra items of information the writer may have collected. They should be useful to the article but essential to the text.

V. PARENTHETICALS

Parentheticals are valuable in certain situations but are often overused. The Bluebook contains some valuable instructions on this issue at Rule 1.5, with which everyone should be familiar. In sum, it implies that parentheticals are not required, or even recommended, where the relevance of the cited authority is clear from the text. Thus, writing parentheticals that restate the proposition of the text is senseless.

Parentheticals are useful in just a few situations. One example would be when the case is cited for a proposition that is not central to the holding of the case. Thus, if you were discussing appellate standards of review, and you stated that a particular court used a de novo standard, it might be useful to show what the substantive issue was, e.g., “(holding that bonuses for non-strikers constituted unfair labor practice).” For another example, parentheticals are useful when you have a string cite with many cases, each of which varies from the text’s proposition in its own way. Thus, a rule of law regarding the law of medical malpractice might list several cases with parentheticals such as “knee injury,” “shoulder injury,” etc. Yet another example is when you want to quote a short (preferably, less than one sentence), useful phrase.
Parentheticals are not intended to take the place of extended textual footnotes. The form of a parenthetical is very limiting. It is difficult to transmit a well-reasoned description of a case, or syntheses of several cases, when you limit yourself to a single present participle proceeded by one of a short list of signals. The purpose of a law review article is to explain the subject to the reader in a way that is logical and understandable. An author who merely lists cases with parenthetical descriptions does not accomplish this purpose.

Perhaps the best way to understand how parentheticals should be used is to read back issues of our publication or any high-quality law review, taking note of the conventions used by published authors.

VI. PROPER CITATION--BLUEBOOK

Citations, if initially done correctly, save time—time that can be better spent researching, analyzing, and writing. All citations in the Mitchell Hamline Law Review conform to the twentieth edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation, as published by the Columbia Law Review Association, Inc., et al, as well as all local rules in the Mitchell Hamline Law Review style guide contained in this handbook. There are several systems of citation in use in the United States; therefore, many legal periodicals are not in Bluebook form. It is essential to get familiar with the Bluebook and its index. There is a specific Bluebook rule for almost everything.

VII. DRAFT PREPARATION

Plagiarism is not tolerated in law review writing. If discovered, it will result in immediate expulsion from the Law Review. The Law Review, all of the articles that it contains, and other periodicals are copyrighted.

All drafts submitted to the editorial board must conform to the following specifications:

A. Text and footnotes/endnotes must be double-spaced.
B. Follow Bluebook rules. For example, all words that are italicized in the Bluebook should, likewise, be italicized in your paper.
C. Follow The Chicago Manual of Style (16th ed.) for grammar, punctuation, etc.
D. Lateness due to computer problems, printer problems, power failures, traffic, etc. will not be excused.
E. Keep a copy of your draft.

Finally, a word about the editorial process. Students are allowed to direct a reasonable amount of questions to the Notes & Comments Editor. Substantive questions about their write-on submission will not be answered. Ultimately, a student should remember that it is his or her name alone that will be on the paper, and Law Review Editors have the authority only to provide guidance and general advice.
TECHNICAL REQUIREMENTS FOR THE CASE NOTE

A. REQUIREMENTS

1. Comply with the requirements in the Case Note Parameters (located at §2.6).

2. Anonymous ID: Place your write-on ID on the top right-hand corner of each page of each of your final drafts. This must be inserted in the header. This ID is a random, anonymous name that will be assigned to you when the write-on competition begins.

3. Footnote Copy: Applicants must turn in one electronic copy with footnotes. All text in the footnote copy must be identical to the submitted endnote copy.

4. Endnote Copy: Applicants must turn in one electronic copy with endnotes. Page count will be determined using this copy. The case note must have at least 8 pages of text and 8 pages of endnotes, all double-spaced. All text in the endnote copy must be identical to the submitted footnote copy.

5. Naming: Scoring of final case notes is anonymous. Only when the scoring is complete will we match names to case notes. DO NOT INCLUDE A COVER SHEET OR PUT YOUR NAME ANYWHERE ON THE FINAL DRAFT.

B. SUBMISSION

1. Time: Both the footnote and endnote copies of case note submissions are due on Wednesday, June 8 at 8:00 p.m. Because of the editing and evaluation schedule, and for reasons of fairness, we will not accept late submissions, regardless of any excuse. We strongly suggest not waiting until the last minute to hand in your materials. You should save often.

   Electronic submissions: You must electronically submit one copy of the case note in endnote format and one copy of the case note in footnote format. Each must be submitted in separate Word documents. These two documents (as well as your Bluebook quiz and Honor Pledge) must be submitted in one email, and must be received by eic.lawreview@mitchellhamline.edu by 8:00 p.m.

C. HONOR PLEDGE

1. You must fill out and submit an electronic version of a signed honor pledge (see § 1.3 of this handbook) along with your Bluebook quiz and case note (in both endnote and footnote format). Signing the pledge indicates that you have observed the rules according the HONOR CODE section of this Handbook. Please print off the honor pledge, sign it, and then scan it into your computer in PDF format.

2. The case note and Bluebook quiz are to be completed 100% on your own. ANY DIVERGENCE FROM THESE RULES WILL LEAD TO AUTOMATIC DISQUALIFICATION.

3. After you have been assigned a topic, you may disclose your topic to other participants. Once the competition begins, you may not at any time discuss the case, its legal issues, legal research, or legal citation with anyone at all, including but not limited to participants, non-participants, professors, judges, practitioners, Westlaw or Lexis representatives, law school graduates, other law students, friends, family members, or complete strangers. You may ask librarians or library staff specific questions about how to complete a research step you have already identified, such as where to find a book or how to use a specific database features, but you may not ask questions that require a judgment on how best to research your topic. Please note: professors have been advised of which cases the Law Review has selected for the write-on competition this year and have been instructed to inform us of any student violating this policy.

4. You may not conduct interviews or otherwise contact any other person for commentary on a case, brief, article, or any other source connected to your research or your assigned case. This prohibition includes authors of works you come across through research, attorneys, law students, and any persons related to the case.

5. At no time may you show written work to anyone, not even the Notes & Comments Editor.

6. You must be respectful of other participants’ interests in using the same library sources. You may not leave a source in a place where other participants cannot find it.

7. You are expected to adhere to the highest ethical standards. Your signed honor pledge is your contract with the Law Review that you have complied with the MHSL Student Code of Conduct during the competition. Accordingly, you also have a duty to report any known violations of the write-on competition rules by any other participant. Any reports of violations will be taken seriously and false allegations will not be tolerated.
CASE NOTE PARAMETERS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Cover Sheet:</th>
<th>Final Draft: Do not include a cover sheet. Submit one electronic copy of your case note in endnote format and one electronic copy of your case note in footnote format.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Paper:</td>
<td>8 1/2 by 11 inches.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Margins:</td>
<td>One-inch margins on both sides. One-inch margins top and bottom (except for page numbering and ID).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Type:</td>
<td>The case note must be typed. Use twelve-point, Times New Roman font.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Body:</td>
<td>Both text and endnotes must be double-spaced. Indent the first line of each paragraph. Use one space between sentences. Place your write-on ID on the top right-hand corner of each page of each of your final drafts.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Length:</td>
<td>Length will be determined based on your endnote-formatted submission. Text must be at least eight pages. The table of contents is not included in your page count. Endnotes must be at least eight pages. Total length may not exceed twenty pages. Page length may vary for your footnote-formatted submission.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| Title:      | Your title must be in bold and it must be aligned on the left side of the first page. Write your case note topic in all caps, followed by a colon, followed by your title in regular caps, followed by an em dash, followed by the case citation. See the sample below.

CONTRACTS: This Case Was Great—Doe v. Doe, 555 N.W.2d 555 (Minn. 2014)

| Page Numbers: | Page numbers must be centered in the bottom margin.                                                                                                                                                       |
| Anonymous ID  | Your anonymous ID must be in the top right hand corner of each page.                                                                                                                                       |
| Citation:     | Citations must conform to the twentieth edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation.                                                                                                          |
| Honor Pledge: | The Honor Pledge must be signed and scanned into your computer so that you can submit it in electronic version via email with the rest of your submission materials to eic.lawreview@mitchellhamline.edu. |

PAPERS NOT MEETING THESE REQUIREMENTS WILL BE PENALIZED.
These formatting requirements MIGHT NOT be the same as those used in WRAP or LRW.
CASE NOTE SCORING RUBRIC

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>4</th>
<th>3</th>
<th>2</th>
<th>1</th>
<th>Points</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Thoroughness</td>
<td>The case note uses all significant primary and secondary authority. Many sources are unique and diverse.</td>
<td>The case note uses most significant primary and secondary authority. Some sources are unique and diverse.</td>
<td>The case note uses some significant primary and secondary authority. A few sources are unique and diverse.</td>
<td>The case note uses minimal significant primary and secondary authority. Sources are neither unique nor diverse.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Application of Authority</td>
<td>All statements are supported by appropriate authority. Almost all sentences include a footnote.</td>
<td>Most statements are supported by appropriate authority, but authority is occasionally lacking. Most sentences include a footnote.</td>
<td>Some statements are supported with appropriate authority, but authority is often inadequate. Many sentences include a footnote.</td>
<td>Authority is minimal and usually inadequate. Many sentences lack a footnote.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Organization</td>
<td>The case note follows the outline provided in the guidelines or modifies the structure in an appropriate way. Paragraphs are structured thoughtfully.</td>
<td>The case note makes minor, inappropriate deviations from the suggested structure. There are a few minor issues with paragraph structure.</td>
<td>The case note makes several minor, inappropriate deviations or one major deviation from the suggested structure. There are several minor issues with paragraph structure.</td>
<td>The case note bears little or no resemblance to the outline provided in the guidelines and lacks any coherent structure.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Writing Ability</td>
<td>The case note is very reader-friendly. Each sentence is free from ambiguity or vagueness. Each sentence is written in plain, formal language and is free from legalese.</td>
<td>The case note is reader-friendly. Most sentences are free from ambiguity or vagueness. Most sentences are written in plain language, but some are informal or include unnecessary legalese.</td>
<td>The case note is somewhat reader-friendly. Some sentences are ambiguous or vague. Several sentences include informal language or include unnecessary legalese.</td>
<td>The case note is not reader-friendly. Many sentences are ambiguous or vague. Many sentences include informal language or include unnecessary legalese.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Clarity</td>
<td>Endnotes are always related to the text and are always informative. The endnotes go beyond mere citation of sources and include ample explanatory text.</td>
<td>Endnotes are usually related to the text and are often informative. The endnotes include some explanatory text.</td>
<td>Endnotes are usually related to the text and are sometimes informative. The endnotes include minimal explanatory text.</td>
<td>Endnotes sometimes relate to the text and are rarely informative. The endnotes include no explanatory text.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2.7 Case Note Scoring Rubric

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Overall Thesis</th>
<th>Analysis and Persuasion</th>
<th>Technical Aspects</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The overall thesis is thorough, sound, and unique (i.e., novel and innovative). The analysis of the case is persuasive and compelling.</td>
<td>The overall thesis is thorough and sound but lacks uniqueness. The analysis of the case is generally persuasive but some secondary arguments are not convincing.</td>
<td>The overall thesis is sound but lacks thoroughness and uniqueness. The analysis of the case is somewhat persuasive but some primary arguments are not convincing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Support of Thesis</td>
<td>The overall thesis is well supported throughout the case note. Each section and paragraph complements the author's overall thesis.</td>
<td>The overall thesis is usually well-supported. Most sections or paragraphs complement the overall thesis, but the writing is occasionally tangential or superfluous.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Grammar and Proofreading</td>
<td>The case note has 0–4 grammar and spelling errors according to the Chicago Manual of Style (CMOS).</td>
<td>The case note has 5–10 grammar and spelling errors according to CMOS.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Citation Accuracy (Bluebook)</td>
<td>The case note has 11–16 grammar and spelling errors according to CMOS.</td>
<td>The case note has 17 or more grammar and spelling errors according to CMOS.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>0–4 Errors = 12 pts</td>
<td>13–16 Errors = 9 pts</td>
<td>25–28 Errors = 6 pts</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5–8 Errors = 11 pts</td>
<td>17–20 Errors = 8 pts</td>
<td>29–32 Errors = 5 pts</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9–12 Errors = 10 pts</td>
<td>21–24 Errors = 7 pts</td>
<td>33–36 Errors = 4 pts</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>37–40 Errors = 3 pts</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>41–44 Errors = 2 pts</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>45–48 Errors = 1 pt</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TOTAL POINTS (from both pages):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Mandatory 2 point deduction:</th>
<th>Mandatory 1 point deduction for any other deviations from the Case Note Checklist</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>□ absence of a title</td>
<td>□ incorrect font</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>□ page length violation</td>
<td>□ incorrect margins</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>□ not double spaced</td>
<td>□ absence of a title</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

DEDUCTIONS:

GRAND TOTAL:
CASE NOTE STRATEGIES

1. Always keep in mind the general principles that are laid out in “What Is a Case Note?”
2. Prepare the case note:
   A. Read the court’s opinion and any concurring or dissenting opinions very carefully.
      1) Identify the important issue or issues. Determine their significance.
      2) Remember—you do not need to address every issue raised by the court.
      3) Keep a narrow focus.
         a. Does the case address a novel issue?
         b. Does the court develop a novel theory or approach?
         c. Does the court misapply law or apply it correctly?
         d. Are policy rationales persuasive or unpersuasive?
         e. Is there procedural error?
         f. What is the history of the issues?
   B. Develop a theme for your analysis. Adopt a critical or positive approach.
   C. Research the issues raised by your theme.
      1) Research both primary and secondary authority.
      2) Include relevant national and local law.
      3) Find historical and current law.
      4) Use a diverse variety of sources.
   D. Begin writing. Text must be at least eight pages long.
      1) Title. The title should be single-spaced. It should state the general subject area, then describe the main point of your article, and then list the name of the case. A creative title is a plus.
         Example:
      2) Introduction. The introduction should include:
         a. A brief statement of the relevant procedure and the holding;
         b. A brief description of the issues raised; and
         c. A brief statement of the analysis to follow.
      3) History of the relevant law. Set up this section so that it relates to your analysis to follow.
         a. Identify the issue or issues you will analyze historically.
         b. Examine the development of the law regarding these issues.
         c. Specifically address Minnesota law, but you may address the law of other jurisdictions if it is applicable.
         d. Discuss the historical events leading up to the main case, but do not yet discuss the main case itself.
         e. Include elements of the law, governing rules, standards, statutes, or regulations, as well as any specific exceptions to the law.
      4) Facts of the case.
         a. Present the major facts in the body.
         b. Present the secondary facts in the endnotes.
c. State the facts succinctly, but do not omit significant facts.

5) Statement of the court’s analysis and holding.
   a. State the court’s holding.
   b. State the court’s reasoning.
   c. Tie your case to the law as described in your history section.

6) Analysis.
   a. State your opinion here, and only here. Criticize or support the holding and analysis. If criticizing, offer an alternative approach and an explanation.
   b. Explain whether the decision fits with prior law or whether it departs.
   c. Discuss policy ramifications.

7) Conclusion.
   a. Summarize the significance of the case.
   b. Reiterate your theme.

8) Endnotes. The endnotes are perhaps the most important part of the case note. Well-written endnotes exemplify mastery of the case note.
    a. Endnotes must be at least eight pages long.
    b. Use the twentieth edition of the Bluebook.
    c. Follow the “law review” format from the Bluebook’s white pages.
    d. Follow the Mitchell Hamline Law Review style guide as set out in this packet. This may modify the Bluebook. THE MITCHELL
       HAMLINE LAW REVIEW STYLE GUIDE TAKES PRECEDENT
       OVER THE BLUEBOOK.
    e. Demonstrate proper use of introductory signals.
    f. Use pincites where appropriate.
    g. Do not use footnotes—use endnotes.
    h. Nearly every sentence should have a citation.
    i. Avoid overusing direct quotations. Paraphrase where appropriate.
    j. Include the following in endnotes:
       - Citations
       - Textual support for the text and the citation
       - Historical or background explanation
       - Secondary information
       - Discussions of collateral matters

E. Continue to research after you start writing. You will almost certainly find new issues you need to research.
F. Read case notes available on the Mitchell Hamline Law Review website for guidance and ideas.
G. Comply with general writing principles. Use proper spelling, punctuation, grammar, sentence structure, diction, transitions, etc. according to the Chicago Manual of Style (16th ed.).

Hand in your case note and go celebrate a job well done!
PUNCTUATION AND STYLE

This is a short summary of some of the more important rules that need to be observed when writing, quoting, and editing. Many of these are taken verbatim from The Chicago Manual of Style (16th ed.). This list is not complete; it contains only those rules that are frequently violated. If you have any questions not answered in this handout, consult The Chicago Manual of Style.

A. Periods

Periods are almost always placed within quotation marks, even within single quotation marks that set off special terms at the end of a sentence.

Mark Twain said, “Let us endeavor so to live that when we come to die even the undertaker will be sorry.”

“A person’s own death becomes real to him after the death of both parents. Until then, there was someone else who was ‘supposed to’ die before him; now that no one stands between him and death, it becomes his ‘turn.’”

Robert Novick, The Examined Life.

B. Colons

Colons should always be placed outside quotation marks.

Kego has three objections to “Filmore’s Summer”: it was contrived; the characters were flat; the dialogue was unrealistic.

When a colon is used to introduce a statement, quotation, list, related clause, etc., there is only one space between the colon and the work or punctuation following the colon.

“What then is time? If no one asks me I know; if I wish to explain it to one that asks I know not.” St. Augustine, Confessions.

C. Brackets

Brackets have two frequent uses in law review writing (particularly in use with quotations). Brackets are used to enclose editorial interpolations, corrections, explanations, or comments in quoted materials.

 “[A Conservative] is enamored of existing evils, as distinguished from a Liberal, who wishes to replace them with others.” Ambrose Bierce, The Devil’s Dictionary.

Gore Vidal said, “[Ronald Reagan is a] triumph of the embalmer’s art.”

Applicants may access the Chicago Manual of Style (16th ed.) in print at the Hamline Law and Bush Memorial libraries. Applicants may also access the Chicago Manual of Style online through the Warren E. Burger Library Subscription Databases.
Brackets are also used to indicate a change in capitalization or other alteration.

Jeremy Bentham said, “[E]very law is an infraction of liberty.”

George Orwell believed that England is “the most class-ridden country under the sun” and that “[i]t is a land of snobbery and privilege, ruled largely by the old and silly.”

D. Quotation Marks

Quoted words, phrases, and sentences that run into the text are enclosed in double quotation marks. Single quotation marks, however, enclose quotations within a quotation.

“‘Journalese’ is a quilt of instant words patched together out of other parts of speech. Adjectives are used as nouns (‘greats,’ ‘notables’). Nouns are extended into adjectives (‘insightful’). Nouns are used as verbs (‘to host’), or they are chopped off to form verbs (‘enthuse,’ ‘emote’), or they are padded to form verbs (‘beef up,’ ‘put teeth into’).” William Zinsser, On Writing Well.

E. Block Quotations

Material set off from the text as a block quotation should not be enclosed in quotation marks. Any quoted matter within a block quotation should be enclosed in double quotation marks, even if the source quoted uses single marks.

Therefore, when a quotation that runs into the text in the original is converted into a block quotation, the initial and final quotation marks must be deleted and the internal marks changed to double quotation marks. Similarly, if a quotation set off from the text in the original is run into the text, initial and final quotation marks must be added and any internal quotation marks changed accordingly.

F. Run-In Quotations

Run-in quotations (as opposed to block quotations) are in the same type size as the text and are enclosed in double quotation marks. When a quotation is used as a syntactical part of a sentence, it begins with a lowercase letter, even though the original is a complete sentence beginning with a capital. Remember, whenever the original is changed in any way, the change or addition must be enclosed in brackets.

Jeremy Bentham once said that “[l]awyers are the only persons in whom ignorance of the law is not punished.”

Clarence Darrow believed that people insist on the death penalty because “human beings enjoy the suffering of others.” Clarence Darrow, The Story of My Life.

Note: The initial letter of a block quotation may be lowercase if the syntax demands it, but a colon is usually used to introduce a long, formal quotation.
When a quotation is not syntactically dependent on the rest of the sentence, the initial letter is capitalized.

Jeremy Bentham said, “Lawyers are the only persons in whom ignorance of the law is not punished.”

Clarence Darrow believed he knew why many people in the world still insist upon the death penalty. As Darrow explained, “Different people would give different reasons for this, but the real reason is that human beings enjoy the sufferings of others.”

G. Ellipses

Any omission of a word or phrase (including citations), line, or paragraph, from within a quoted passage must be indicated by ellipsis points (three dots). The Law Review distinguishes between the use of ellipsis points for an omission within a sentence and between sentences.

Three dots indicate an omission within a sentence. Thus an omission in the sentence by Leonard Levy:

“Jefferson, like the others, believed that there could be no toleration for serious differences of opinion on the issue of independence.”

As shortened:

“Jefferson . . . believed that there could be no toleration for serious differences of opinion on the issue of independence.”

Four spaced dots indicate the omission of (1) the last part of the quoted sentence, (2) the first part of the next sentence, (3) a whole sentence or more, or (4) a whole paragraph or more. When a sentence ends with a question mark or an exclamation point in the original, this mark is retained, and three dots are used for the ellipsis.

When four dots indicate the omission of the end of a sentence, the last dot is the period. A grammatically complete sentence, either as it is quoted or in combination with the text preceding it, should precede an ellipsis indicated by four dots. Similarly, a full sentence should also follow a four-dot ellipsis. In other words, every succession of words preceding or following four ellipsis points should be a functional sentence. The following is by Emerson:

The spirit of our American radicalism is destructive and aimless: it is not loving, it has no ulterior and divine ends; but is destructive only out of hatred and selfishness. On the other side, the conservative party, composed of the most moderate, able, and cultivated part of the population, is timid, and merely defensive of property. It vindicates no right, it aspires to no real good, it brands no crime, it proposes no generous policy, it does not build, nor write nor cherish the arts, nor foster religion, nor establish schools, nor encourage science, nor emancipate the slave, nor befriend the poor, or the Indian, or the immigrant. From neither party, when in power, has the world any benefit to expect in science, art, or humanity, at all commensurate with the resources of the nation.
The passage might be shortened as follows:

The spirit of our American radicalism is destructive and aimless. . . . [T]he conservative party . . . is timid, and merely defensive of property. It vindicates no right, it aspires to no real good. . . . From neither party . . . has the world any benefit to expect in science, art, or humanity, at all commensurate with the resources of the nation.

Three dots without a period are used at the end of a quoted sentence that is deliberately and grammatically incomplete:

Everyone knows that the Declaration of Independence begins with the sentence “When, in the course of human events . . .” But how many people can recite more than the first few lines of the document?

In general, no ellipsis points should be used (1) before or after an obviously incomplete sentence, (2) before or after a run-in quotation of a complete sentence, (3) before a block quotation beginning with a complete sentence or an incomplete sentence that completes a sentence in the text, or (4) after a block quotation ending with a complete sentence.

H. Sic

Sic may be inserted in brackets following a word misspelled or somehow incorrect in the original. (Note that sic is a complete word, not an abbreviation, and, therefore, takes no period.) Overuse of this device, however, is to be discouraged. In most articles it is unnecessary to call attention to every variant spelling or every oddity of expression in quoted material.

I. Hyphen (-)

Do not flank a hyphen with spaces. The hyphen is used only in compound words and names. Hyphenate compound numbers from twenty-one to ninety-nine. Do not hyphenate adverbs ending in “ly.”

- E.g., “five-year-old child,” or “third-largest town”
- NOT “highly-paid,” “utterly-useless,” “frankly-discussed-subject,” or “newly-discovered fact”

J. En-Dash (–)

The en-dash is used primarily to connect ranges of numbers. The en-dash is also used in limited cases of compound adjectives involving open compounds.

- E.g., “1998–2002” or “§§ 1–4”
- E.g., “post–World War II,” or “quasi-public–quasi-judicial body”

K. Em-Dash (—)

Do not flank the em-dash with spaces. The em-dash is the most commonly used of the dashes, but two uses are the most common:
• It can be used to amplify or explain.
  o E.g., “It was a revival of the most potent image in modern democracy—the revolutionary idea.”

• It can also be used to set off a phrase.
  o E.g., “Because the data had not been fully analyzed—the reason for this will be discussed later—the publication of the report was delayed.”

L. Miscellaneous Notes

• Use active verbs.
• Omit needless words.
• Avoid legalese.
• Use plain, familiar, concrete language.
• Proofread.
• Use one space between sentences, not two. Note: This requirement follows the advice of the Chicago Manual of Style (16th ed.) and The Bluebook (19th ed.).
  o An easy way to visually check spaces between sentences is to click the ¶ button in Microsoft Word under “Paragraph” on the “Home” tab (this button is located above the tabs on Word for Mac).
• Distinguish between hyphens, en-dashes, and em-dashes.
MICROSOFT WORD SHORTCUTS

These tips are optional and for the writer’s convenience only. Shortcuts may work differently on different versions of MS Word. [NOTE: Mac shortcuts are in parenthesis]

Generally

FORMATTING SHORTCUTS

Small Caps: CTRL+SHIFT+K (COMMAND+SHIFT+K)

Italics: CTRL+I (COMMAND+I)

Underline: CTRL+U (COMMAND+U)

Bold: CTRL+B (COMMAND+B)

ENDNOTE/FOOTNOTE SHORTCUTS

Endnote: ALT+CTRL+D (COMMAND+OPTION+E)

Footnote: ALT+CTRL+F (COMMAND+OPTION+F)

VIEWING FORMATTING CHARACTERS

Make Invisible Characters Visible: CTRL+8 (COMMAND+8)

CUTTING/COPYING/PASTING

Cut: CTRL+X (COMMAND+X)

Copy: CTRL+C (COMMAND+C)

Paste: CTRL+P (COMMAND+V)

FILE SHORTCUTS

Save: CTRL+S (COMMAND+S)

Close: CTRL+W (COMMAND+W)

Print: CTRL+P (COMMAND+P)

BREAKS

Page Break: CTRL+ENTER (Fn+SHIFT+RETURN)

Write-on Competition Tips

ENDNOTE TIPS (PC)

A. Using the shortcut, “ALT+CTRL+D” instead of mouse-clicking “Insert > Footnote > Endnote” will save you a great deal of time.

B. For the write-on competition, endnotes will need to be in Arabic numerals (i.e., “1, 2, 3 …”) though the default Word format is small Roman numerals (i.e., “i, ii, iii …”).

To change the format from Roman to Arabic numerals, do the following.

1. Click on the “Insert” section of the ribbon
2. Click on the “dialog box launcher” in the Footnotes section (the dialog box launcher is the small arrow in the bottom right corner or the Footnotes section)
3. Select the radio button next to “Endnotes”
4. Under “Number format,” select “1, 2, 3 . . .” from the drop-down menu
5. Click “Apply”

From this point forward, your notes will be in Arabic format.
ENDNOTE TIPS (MAC)
A. Using the shortcut, “COMMAND+OPTION+E” instead of mouse-clicking “Insert > Footnote > Endnote > Insert” will save you a great deal of time.
B. For the write-on competition, endnotes will need to be in Arabic numerals (i.e., “1, 2, 3 …”) though the default Word format is small Roman numerals (i.e., “i, ii, iii …”).
To change the format from Roman to Arabic numerals, do the following.
1. Click Insert > Footnote
2. Select the radio button next to “Endnote”
3. Under “Format” select “1, 2, 3, …” from the drop-down menu
4. Make sure the “Numbering” drop-down menu is set to “Continuous” and the changes apply to the whole document.
5. Click “Apply”
From this point forward, your notes will be in Arabic format.

SET SHORTCUTS FOR VARIOUS SYMBOLS (SUCH AS “EM-DASHES” (—), “EN-DASHES” (–), AND “SECTION” (§)) (PC)
1. Click on the “Insert” section of the ribbon
2. Click on “Symbol” and then click on “More Symbols”
3. Choose the symbol you want to modify (such as “em dash”) and click on it so it is highlighted
   a. The en dash and em dash symbols are towards the end of the list of symbols
4. Click “Shortcut Key”
5. Choose whatever shortcut you will remember (ex: ALT+M)
6. Click “Assign”
7. Click “Close”
8. Click “Close”
9. Repeat with other symbols

SET SHORTCUTS FOR VARIOUS SYMBOLS (SUCH AS “EM-DASHES” (—), “EN-DASHES” (–), AND “SECTION” (§)) (MAC)
1. Click Insert > Symbol > Advanced Symbol
2. Click on “Special Characters”
3. Choose the symbol you want to modify (such as “em dash”) and click on it so it is highlighted
4. Click “Keyboard Shortcut”
5. Click in the box next to “Press New Keyboard Shortcut”
6. Choose whatever shortcut you will remember (ex: CONTROL+M)
7. Click “Assign”
8. Click “OK”
9. Repeat with other symbols
   Note: The default shortcuts for these three symbols is “SHIFT+OPTION+-” (—), (“OPTION+-”) (–), (OPTION+6) (§)
CONVERTING ENDNOTES TO FOOTNOTES
In order to convert your endnotes to footnotes (and vice versa), see https://support.office.com/en-us/article/Convert-footnotes-to-endnotes-ccfd96a0-e26a-4ede-b5ec-7e1a1acd739e?ui=en-US&rs=en-US&ad=US.

TABLE OF CONTENTS PAGINATION
Your table of contents is not included in you page count. In order to correctly paginate your article, see https://support.office.com/en-in/article/Number-pages-differently-in-different-sections-1ba9047e-4534-460f-8003-12a81bb527f3.
SAMPLE CASE NOTE 1

(Disclaimer: While this case note is an excellent example, please note that its formatting does not follow all of the Law Review’s requirements, and its endnotes have not been corrected for any citation errors. Always go to the Bluebook for citation! Additionally, this case note does not include a table of contents, which is required for your submission.)

I. Introduction

In Quade v. Secura Insurance Company, the Minnesota Supreme Court held that the statutorily mandated appraisal clause in special property insurance contracts requires appraisers to make determinations both as to the value and the cause of a loss.1 As a part of this decision, the court found that an appraisal is a condition precedent to litigation even when a partial denial of coverage has been made.2 The court’s decision upholds the public policy of providing efficient, cost-effective alternatives to litigation in insurance disputes.3

This case note first gives a brief overview of the appraisal process before discussing the history of Minnesota law regarding the appraisal clause in property insurance contracts.4 This note also examines the rationale of both the majority and the dissenting opinions in the case at hand.5 Following the discussion of the Quade decision, this note analyzes the court’s interpretation of the disputed policy language.6 Then, this case note analyzes the policy implications of applying this ruling to future litigation. Finally, this note concludes that the Minnesota Supreme Court made the correct decision in ruling that appraisers must necessarily make determinations of causation, but that appraisals should only be a condition precedent to litigation where coverage has not been totally denied.

II. History of the Relevant Law

A. An Evaluation of Appraisal in General

Appraisals are a non-judicial alternative to resolve insurance disputes regarding the amount of loss and are often considered analogous, but more limited than, arbitration procedures. Like arbitration, appraisal is meant to discourage litigation. Unlike arbitrators, however, appraisers may only set the amount of loss—the appraisal process does not displace litigation for resolving liability disputes. Appraisers apply their own skill and knowledge to reach their conclusions instead of acting in a quasi-judicial capacity.

Appraisal provisions have become as important as coverage and exclusion clauses in resolving disputes where disputes are over the amount owed. Today, nearly every property insurance policy contains a standard clause that identifies appraisal as the method for determining the amount of loss. Many special property insurance policies include this clause due to statutory requirements. Because law mandates the wording of these provisions, there is little variation among appraisal provisions, but ample variation in the way these clauses have been interpreted and enforced. Judicial interpretation determines whether the appraisal process is optional or required prior to filing suit.

B. Interpreting the Appraisal Clause in Minnesota

Minnesota property insurance policies have included appraisal clauses for more than 130 years. Courts allowed appraisers to make determinations as to the application of the policy in early insurance litigation cases. In 1895, the legislature enacted the Minnesota Standard Fire Insurance Policy with a mandatory clause defining the appraisal process. The statute thereby standardized the appraisal process to support the public policy of ensuring a “plain, speedy, inexpensive and just determination of the extent of the loss.” The legislature’s intention was that appraisals would “provide for the ascertainment of loss, not liability.” The standardization also prevented insurers from crafting provisions designed to take unfair advantage of its policyholders, an inherent problem in adhesion contracts.

The appraisal clause included in the standard form states “[i]n case the insured and this company . . . shall fail to agree as to the actual cash value or the amount of loss . . . [t]he appraisers shall then appraise the loss, stating separately actual value and loss to each item.” In 1914, the Minnesota Supreme Court interpreted this clause as confining appraisers’ determinations of causation to include whether the damage resulted from causes covered by the policy or from... non-covered causes.\textsuperscript{27} Despite allowing appraisers to consider causative factors to determine the value of a loss, Minnesota courts generally agree that appraisers are not allowed to construe the meaning or application of an insurance policy.\textsuperscript{28}

Questions regarding liability have traditionally been reserved for the courts.\textsuperscript{29} However, the distinction between questions of liability and the value of a loss are not always easily drawn.\textsuperscript{30} The disagreement between the majority and the dissent in \textit{Quade} highlight the public policy considerations the court has upheld in interpreting the standard form provided by Minnesota Statutes Section 65.01.\textsuperscript{31}

\section*{III. The \textit{Quade} Decision}

\textbf{A. Facts and Procedure}

David and Melynda Quade owned a special farm owners protector policy through Secura Insurance for direct physical property loss caused by fire and wind.\textsuperscript{32} The policy expressly excluded damages resulting from deficient maintenance.\textsuperscript{33} Per statutory requirements, the policy also includes the contested “amount of loss” language in the appraisal clause.\textsuperscript{34}

On July 10, 2008, a summer storm with high winds caused extensive damage to several buildings and other property on Dave and Melynda Quade’s farm in Hastings, MN.\textsuperscript{35} The Quades submitted a claim to Secura for the losses sustained by the storm. Secura paid for some of the damages, but determined that the damage to the roofs of a warehouse, the horse barn, and a cow barn resulted from “continual deterioration” rather than the July windstorm and were therefore exempt based on the exclusion for inadequate maintenance.\textsuperscript{36} Rather than pursuing an appraisal, as Secura advised after it denied this portion of the claim, the Quades initiated an action for breach of contract.\textsuperscript{37}

The Dakota County District Court granted summary judgment for Secura on the basis that an appraisal includes determination of causation.\textsuperscript{38} The decision included an order for the parties to participate in the appraisal process, but noted that applicability of the policy’s exclusion was a legal question for the court at a later date.\textsuperscript{39} The court of appeals reversed the summary judgment on the grounds that a legal question—the applicability of the exclusion clause—was in controversy.\textsuperscript{40} In the appeal before the Minnesota Supreme Court, the main point of contention between the parties centered on differing interpretations of the “amount of loss” phrase in the appraisal clause.\textsuperscript{41}

The Quades argued for a narrow interpretation of “amount of loss.”\textsuperscript{42} This interpretation would not grant appraisers power to determine the cause of a loss when evaluating its value.\textsuperscript{43} Secura countered that this interpretation would confuse “amount of loss” with the question of coverage under the policy.\textsuperscript{44} According to Secura, coverage questions apply to whether an event is covered under the policy, and “amount of loss” relates to the damage caused by a covered event.\textsuperscript{45} After careful consideration, the Minnesota Supreme Court reversed the court of appeals’ decision, holding that “amount of loss” unambiguously requires an appraiser’s assessment to include a determination of causation. The court also noted that such a determination would not be a final as to liability under the policy.

B. The Rationale of the Minnesota Supreme Court Decision & Dissent

The majority agreed appraisers “may not construe the policy or decide whether the insurer should pay,” in accordance with the historical interpretation of the appraisal clause. However, the court reasoned that the legal definitions of “loss” in the context of insurance contracts refer to the damages for which the insurer is responsible. The court stated there was only one reasonable interpretation of the phrase possible in the context of the policy. By definition, an appraiser must necessarily consider causation in order to set the amount of loss.
The court reserved the judicial power to make final coverage determinations where an appraisal incorrectly addresses questions of liability.

The court further stated that adopting the Quades’ view would circumvent the public policy reasons that have given to the rise of appraisal as the preferred method of resolving disputes over coverage amounts. With its decision, the court incontrovertibly names appraisal as a condition precedent to filing suit in property insurance claims whenever questions regarding the amount of damages exists.
The dissenting opinion rejects the majority’s ruling on the grounds that the dispute is not over the amount of loss, but over coverage under the policy.\(^5^7\) Where there is no dispute over the amount of loss there is no need for an appraisal per the statutory language.\(^5^8\) The logic behind this conclusion is that litigation would be required in addition to the expense of the appraisal, because even a completed appraisal would not resolve the parties’ dispute.\(^5^9\) The dissent warns that the majority decision—despite its assertion to the contrary—would allow an appraiser’s determination of causation to be final.\(^6^0\)

IV. Analysis

_A. Appraisers are Unambiguously Allowed to Determine Causation in Evaluating “Amount of Loss”_

In order to declare appraisal as a condition precedent to litigation the court first had to find the phrase “amount of loss” to be unambiguous. Because insurance contracts are adhesion contracts,\(^6^1\) any reasonable doubt or ambiguity must be resolved in favor of the insured.\(^6^2\) The court followed appropriate standards of contract interpretation in deciding against ambiguity.

Whether policy language is ambiguous is a question for the court.\(^6^3\) The interpretation of insurance contracts has a confusing history in Minnesota common law—methods of interpreting ambiguity range from the strict application of _contra preferendum_\(^6^4\) and the doctrine of reasonable consumer expectations\(^6^5\) to hybrid approaches.\textsuperscript{66} Minnesota has established partiality in favor of insureds,\textsuperscript{67} so it would appear that the majority should have decided in favor of the Quades’ interpretation. However, the contra-insurer rule does not apply to statutorily mandated passages.\textsuperscript{68}

Standard rules of contract interpretation state that a writing is interpreted as a whole.\textsuperscript{69} Ambiguity only exists where terms are subject to more than one reasonable interpretation.\textsuperscript{70} Where language has a “generally prevailing” meaning, it is interpreted in accordance with that meaning.\textsuperscript{71} Additionally, words of art are given their technical meaning when used in a transaction within their technical field.\textsuperscript{72} Because “amount of loss” is an undefined term in the standard fire policy, the court applied the term’s generally prevailing meaning.\textsuperscript{73} By this line of reasoning, the court correctly found the phrase “amount of loss” allows appraisers to consider causative factors when the phrase is used within the field of insurance appraisals.

In addition to applying standard methods of contract interpretation, courts must interpret statutes in accordance with the intention of the legislature.\textsuperscript{74} The legislature intended to enforce standard terms and procedures when it enacted the standard form policy.\textsuperscript{75} Insurance policies must be consistent with both the letter and the spirit of the statute.\textsuperscript{76} Since public policy strongly favors arbitration for insurance disputes, the court’s finding that appraisals are a condition precedent to litigation is in accordance with the legislature’s intent.

B. Requiring Appraisal as Condition Precedent in All Cases May Contradict Public Policy

While the majority logically reasoned that appraisers must determine causative factors, the ruling that appraisal is a condition precedent to litigation should be construed narrowly. “Appraisal should not be a sideshow in a coverage litigation, but an alternative dispute resolution process designed to quickly and inexpensively determine the amount of loss when that is the dispute among the parties.” The presumption that an appraisal to determine the “amount of loss” will be needed in the majority of liability disputes reaching the courtroom is a sound supposition given the nature of insurance claims.

Generally speaking, a court’s review of an appraisal award is grounded in contract interpretation. The judicial scope of review of appraisal awards is limited to fraud, corruption, or misconduct resulting in an unjust result or instances where the appraisers have overstepped their authority. This means that courts would not review the third-party experts’ analysis of the amount or causation of a loss, but whether those experts complied with the terms of their contractual obligation. This would allow an appraisal to stand where appraisers made an honest mistake—perhaps pertaining to the cause of the loss—in judgment.
On the other hand, the time and expense of appraisal would be a worthless endeavor for both parties if a court later rules the entire loss to be excluded by the policy. Secura issued payment for part of the Quades’ single claim and rejected coverage for three structures. The primary dispute between the parties was the extent of the damage for which Secura should pay. While the distinction smacks of technicality, it is sound policy to draw the proverbial line in the sand between a case where the insurer denies a claim in its entirety and where the insurer pays a portion of the claim and rejects the rest in good faith. This division would encourage insurers to admit liability, pay at least a portion of the claim, and initiate the appraisal process.

Enforcing a standard process that upholds the policy goals underlying insurance appraisal is critical to prevent further unnecessary litigation. As stated previously, public policy favors the insured in the context of insurance contracts. If an insured plaintiff attacks an appraisal award, the plaintiff bears the burden of proof. However, in litigation, the burden of proof is shifted to the insurer to show application of an exclusion clause. Public policy favors the latter—in most cases, the insurance provider is in a better position to prove the cause is excluded than an insured party is to invalidate a third-party expert’s determination of causation. Indeed, even courts are loath to disturb factual findings of expert appraisers.
CONCLUSION

The court’s holding in Quade that appraisal is a condition precedent to litigation sets a standard expectation for parties involved in disputes as to the amount of loss following property damage.91 While the court correctly interpreted “amount of loss” to unambiguously allow appraisers to determine factors of causation, the precedent the court sets for appraisal as a condition precedent to litigation should not be applied in all disputes. Appraisals should be considered a condition precedent only under the condition that the insurance provider has not flatly refused liability for an entire claim.

2 Id.

4 See infra, Part II.

5 See infra, Part III.

6 See infra, Part IV.A.

7 See infra, Part IV.B.

8 See infra, Part V.

10 RUSS & SEGALLA, supra note 3, § 209:8.

11 Id.

15 See 5 RICHARD J. COHEN, ET AL., APPLEMAN ON INSURANCE § 47.06, at 1, 2013, available at LEXIS; Law & Starinovich, supra note 12, at 292.
(mandating that all fire insurance policies contain an appraisal clause as worded in the statute); Minn. Stat. § 65A.01 (2013) (providing a standard form for fire insurance policy including the appraisal clause).

2 Richard C. Bennet, Insuring Real Property § 30.01 at 1, 2013, available at LEXIS.

Janney, Semple & Co. v. Goehringer, 52 Minn. 428, 430, 54 N.W. 481, 482 (1893).

Id.

See Act of Apr. 25, 1895, ch. 175, § 53, 1895 Minn. Laws 392, 421 (codified as amended in Minn. Stat. § 65A.01, subdiv. 3 (2013)).

Glidden Co. v. Retail Hardware Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Minnesota, 181 Minn. 518, 523, 233 N.W. 310, 312 (1930) aff'd sub nom. Hardware Dealers' Mut. Fire Ins. Co. of Wis. v. Glidden Co., 284 U.S. 151, 52 S. Ct. 69, 76 L. Ed. 214 (1931) and overruled on other grounds (general agreement to arbitrate all differences to arise under a contract is contrary to public policy and therefore void) by Park Const. Co. v. Indep. Sch. Dist. No. 32, Carver Cnty., 209 Minn. 182, 296 N.W. 475 (1941).

Dworsky v. Vermes Credit Jewelry, Inc., 244 Minn. 62, 65, 69 N.W.2d 118, 121 (1955) ("[T]he plain intent of the legislature was to nullify offending provisions favoring the insurer").

MINN. STAT. § 65A.01, subdiv. 3 (2013) (emphasis added).

Am. Cent. Ins. Co. v. Dist. Court, 125 Minn. 374, 378, 147 N.W. 242, 244 (1914).

See, e.g., Mork v Eureka-Sec. Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 230 Minn. 382, 384, 42 N.W.2d 33, 35 (1950) (stating that a board of arbitrators’ decision that a loss was not covered by the insurance policy was not final).

See, e.g., id. (explaining arbitrators’ findings regarding liability were surplus and outside the arbitrators’ province); Itasca Paper Co. v. Niagara Fire Ins. Co., 175 Minn. 73, 77–78, 220 N.W. 425, 426–27 (1928) (stating that appraisers’ findings of law and fact are conclusive, but findings of liability are not).

Law & Starinovich, supra note 12, at 295.

32 Id. at 704.

33 Id.

34 See supra, Part II.B.

35 In addition to the contested damage to the roofs of three barns, high winds pushed two structures off their bases, overturned loaded semitrailers, and tore sections from several buildings. *Brief, Addendum & Appendix of Respondents at *1 (No. A10-714), available at 2010 WL 8190755.

36 Quade, 814 N.W.2d 703, 704 (Minn. 2012).

37 Id. at 705.

39 Id.

41 Quade v. Secura Ins. Co., 814 N.W.2d 703, 705 (Minn. 2012).

42 Id. at 706.

43 Id.

44 Id. at 705–07.

45 Id. at 706.
46 Id. at 708.

47 Id.

48 Id. at 706.

49 See supra, Part II.B.

50 Quade, 814 N.W.2d 703, 706 (Minn. 2012) (citing BLACK’S LAW DICTIONARY 1030 (9th ed. 2009) (defining insurance loss as “[t]he amount of financial detriment caused by . . . an insured property's damage, for which the insurer becomes liable”); MERRIAM–WEBSTER'S COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY 687 (10th ed. 2001) (defining “loss” in the insurance context as “the amount of an insured's financial detriment by death or damage that the insurer becomes liable for”)).

51 Quade, 814 N.W.2d 703, 706 (Minn. 2012).

52 Quade, 814 N.W.2d 703, 706 (Minn. 2012).

53 Id.

54 Id. at 707. Finality of appraisal findings of causation depend on (1) the nature of the damage, (2) the possible causes, (3) the parties’ dispute, and (4) the structure of the appraisal award. Id.

55 Id. at 707 (“Adopting the Quades’ interpretation would render appraisal clauses inoperative in most situations, and that result is in direct conflict with the public policy behind the appraisal process and the fact that we have repeatedly encouraged its use in Minnesota.”).
56 Id. at 708.

57 Id. (Page, J. dissenting).

58 Id. at 709.

59 Id.

60 Id.

61 BLACK’S LAW DICTIONARY 143 (3d pocket ed. 2006) (defining adhesion contract as a “standard-form contract prepared by one party, to be signed by another party in a weaker position, [usually] a consumer, who adheres to the contract with little choice about the terms”).

64 A party drafting an agreement is likely to consider his own benefit and is more likely to have reason to know of uncertainties of meaning. Interpretation against the drafter is often invoked in cases of standardized contracts and where the drafting party has a stronger bargaining position. RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONTRACTS § 206 (1981). See generally, BRITTON D. WEIMER ET AL., 22 MINN.
PRAC. §2.3, (2012) (“[Contra proferendem] means that an ambiguous contract, especially an adhesion contract, is construed against the drafter.”).

65 See Mark. C. Rahdert, Reasonable Expectations Revisited, 5 CONN. INS. L.J. 107, 115–16 (1998) (“When a policy term is unambiguous, the court should adopt the interpretation that favors the insured.”).

68 BRITTON ET AL., supra note 64 at § 2:3.

70 See generally, 2 RUSS & SEGALLA, supra note 3 at § 21:14.

72 Id.

73 Supra p. 6 and note 50.

74 MINN. STAT. § 645.16 (2013).

Law & Starinovich, supra note 12, at 306 (emphasis added).

COHEN, ET AL., APPLEMAN ON INSURANCE § 47.06, at 3, available at LEXIS; Law & Starinovich, supra note 12, at 292.

See Mork v Eureka-Sec. Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 230 Minn. 382, 384, 42 N.W.2d 33, 35 (1950) (“An award in arbitration . . . [w]ill not be vacated unless it clearly appears that it was the result of fraud or because of some misfeasance or malfeasance or wrongdoing on the part of the appraisers.”); See generally Parker, supra note 14 at 946.

Parker, supra note 14 at 946.

Law & Starinovich, supra note 12, at 297.

Supra 15 note 35.

Law & Starinovich, supra note 12, at 308–10 (“Where a dispute is strictly over coverage, appraisal is unnecessary.”).
86 Supra, Part IV.B and accompanying text at note 59. See also 5 Lon A. Berk, et al., Appleman on Insurance § 48.03 at 1, 2013, available at Lexis (“Consumers have an interest in having their disputes with insurers resolved through judicial proceedings where a jury can resolve issues of fact and where bad faith exposure may operate as a genuine disincentive to insurer misconduct.”).

87 Parker, supra note 14 at 937.

89 For a brief overview of public policy considerations under Minnesota insurance law, see Britton et al., supra note 64 at § 2:6.

90 See supra p. 9 and note 82. See also Law & Starinovoch, supra note 12 at 308 (“[A]ppraisal places great reliance upon expert appraisers who may be best positioned to determine the amount of loss.”).

SAMPLE CASE NOTE 2

(Disclaimer: While this case note is an excellent example, please note that its formatting does not follow all of the Law Review’s requirements, and its endnotes have not been corrected for any citation errors. Always go to the Bluebook for citation! Additionally, this case note does not include a table of contents, which is required for your submission.)

CRIMINAL LAW: Behind Closed Doors: Expanding the Triviality Doctrine to Intentional Closures--State v. Brown

I. Introduction

The Minnesota Supreme Court recently held in State v. Brown\(^1\) that the intentional locking of a courtroom during jury instructions does not implicate a defendant’s right to a public trial.\(^2\) The majority found that the trial court’s actions were too trivial to affect any of the defendant’s public trial rights.\(^3\) Because the court adopted the triviality doctrine, it did not apply the traditional test for alleged Sixth Amendment violations.\(^4\)

This case note begins by exploring the history of the right to a public trial in America.\(^5\) Then it discusses the facts of Brown and the court’s rationale for its decision.\(^6\) Next, it argues that the court expanded the triviality doctrine’s scope beyond its proper application.\(^7\) Finally, this note concludes that Brown will lead to many unwarranted courtroom closures.\(^8\)

II. History of the Right to a Public Trial in the United States

A. Origins of the Right to a Public Trial
The guarantee to a speedy and public trial is generally seen as a common law privilege originating in England.⁹ English judges consistently applied the guarantee throughout the late seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.¹⁰ At the time, the right was not seen as a benefit for the accused¹¹ but rather a way to reinforce the legitimacy of convictions.¹²

B. The Public Trial Guarantee in the United States

The founding fathers recognized that the public trial guarantee provided important safeguards to freedom and chose to adopt it into the Bill of Rights.¹³ The Sixth Amendment of the U.S. and Minnesota Constitutions state that “[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial.”¹⁴ A public trial is defined as a “trial that anyone may attend or observe.”¹⁵ The guarantee is seen as a benefit for the accused.¹⁶ The guarantee is not absolute¹⁷ and at times it must yield to important government interests.¹⁸ Though courts took up the issue prior to the twentieth century,¹⁹ Davis v. United States provided the initial framework for modern jurisprudence.²⁰ The court in Davis held that alleged public trial violations were not harmless errors.²¹ Therefore, the defendant need not show actual harm in order to prevail.

C. The Waller Test

In 1984, the Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional the broad courtroom closure of a seven-day suppression hearing during a criminal trial.²² Writing for the majority, Justice Powell outlined the current test for alleged Sixth Amendment violations.\textsuperscript{23} He held that the party seeking to close the courtroom must: “[1] advance an overriding interest that is likely to be prejudiced, [2] the closure must be no broader than necessary to protect that interest, [3] the trial court must consider reasonable alternatives to closing the proceeding, and [4] it must make findings adequate to support the closure.”\textsuperscript{24} The Court held that a violation of the public trial guarantee does not necessarily require a new trial.\textsuperscript{25} Rather, the “remedy should be appropriate to the violation.”\textsuperscript{26} The Supreme Court recently reaffirmed this rule and applied it to every stage of a trial.\textsuperscript{27}

\textit{D. The Public Trial Guarantee in Minnesota}

Minnesota has generally followed the \textit{Waller} test\textsuperscript{28} though recent jurisprudence has allowed more opportunities for courtroom closure.\textsuperscript{29} Specifically, Minnesota now recognizes that some closures are too trivial to amount to a violation of the Sixth Amendment.\textsuperscript{30}

\textbf{III. The \textit{Brown} Decision}

\textit{A. Facts and Procedural Posture}

On August 29, 2008, Darius Miller was shot and killed outside Whispers Gentlemen’s Club in Minneapolis.\textsuperscript{31} The State charged Brown with first-degree premeditated murder, first-degree premeditated murder committed for the benefit of a gang, second-degree intentional murder, and second-degree intentional murder committed for the benefit of a gang.\textsuperscript{32}

The State presented evidence that just prior to the murder, three of Brown’s acquaintances attacked Miller.\textsuperscript{33} During the fight, someone yelled, “You better go get a gun.”\textsuperscript{34} Immediately preceding the gunshots, an eyewitness reported seeing an individual wearing a white undershirt, a large necklace, and his hair in a ponytail come up the club stairs.\textsuperscript{35} The State introduced jail security camera footage that showed Brown leaving jail twelve hours before Miller’s murder, with his hair in a ponytail and wearing a large necklace, white tank top, and dark pants.\textsuperscript{36} Additionally, the State presented evidence showing that a car seen near the murder was registered to the sister of one of Brown’s acquaintances.\textsuperscript{37} The State had an expert testify that a bullet casing recovered from a shooting that Brown pled guilty to in 2008 matched that of a casing found near Miller’s body.\textsuperscript{38}

Following closing arguments, the trial court ordered the courtroom door be locked for the duration of the jury instructions.\textsuperscript{39} In explaining the situation, the judge stated on the record:

For the benefit of those in the back, I am going to begin giving jury instructions. While that is going on the courtroom is going to be locked and people are not going to be allowed to go in or out. So, if anybody has to leave, now would be the time. You are welcome to [s]tay. But I just want to make sure that everybody knows that the courtroom is going to be locked. We are all good? Deputy?\textsuperscript{40}
For the duration of the jury instructions, no spectators were let in or allowed out.\(^1\)

The jury found Brown guilty on all four counts of murder.\(^2\) The trial court sentenced him to life imprisonment for first-degree murder plus an additional year of imprisonment based on the murder being committed for the benefit of a gang.\(^3\)

B. The Supreme Court’s Decision

Before the Minnesota Supreme Court, Brown argued that he was entitled to a new trial for five reasons.\(^4\) This note focuses on the court’s reasoning in regards to the public trial issue. The court also addressed the admissibility of evidence, jury instructions, testimony, and impeaching evidence.\(^5\) The court ruled in favor of the State on all five issues.\(^6\)

The court noted that denials of the public trial guarantee constitute structural error and are not subject to harmless error review.\(^7\) The court then addressed the purpose of the public trial guarantee, citing the Waller standard.\(^8\) The court explained that not all courtroom restrictions implicate a defendant’s right to a public trial.\(^9\) The court focused on two recent Minnesota decisions which found that certain closures can be “too trivial to amount to a violation of the [Sixth] Amendment.”\(^10\) The court cited several factors for determining that the trial court’s actions were trivial, including that the courtroom was never cleared of all spectators and that the trial remained open to the general public and press.\(^11\) Thus, the Minnesota Supreme Court found that locking the courtroom doors did not implicate Brown’s right to a public trial. The majority concluded by noting that in future cases, the trial court should expressly state on the record why it locked courtroom doors.

IV. Analysis

A. The Triviality Doctrine

The majority erred by applying the triviality doctrine to a case where the judge intentionally closed the courtroom to additional spectators. The majority should have found that the closure implicated the defendant’s Sixth Amendment rights and remanded the case for further proceedings to determine whether the closure satisfied the Waller test.

The triviality standard used in Brown was developed from the often-cited Peterson v. Williams. In that case, a courtroom was closed during the testimony of an undercover agent. The judge inadvertently forgot to reopen the courtroom prior to the next testimony. Thus, for fifteen to twenty minutes, the defendant testified in a closed courtroom.

The Peterson court did not articulate a specific test for determining triviality, but held that because the closure was extremely short, followed by a helpful summation, and entirely inadvertent, the defendant’s Sixth Amendment rights were not infringed upon. The court found that a defendant’s Sixth Amendment rights are only implicated when a closure affects the values served by that right.\textsuperscript{61} Thus, trivial closures are not subject to the \textit{Waller} test.\textsuperscript{62}

\textbf{B. Scope of the Triviality Doctrine}

Courts are reluctant to make a specific test for determining whether a closure is trivial.\textsuperscript{63} Instead, the determination is a fact intensive issue for each case.\textsuperscript{64} Jurisdictions across the country have addressed the issue differently.\textsuperscript{65} Some courts are extremely hesitant to broaden the scope\textsuperscript{66} or even recognize\textsuperscript{67} the doctrine. The doctrine is most often cited in cases involving unintentional closures for short periods of time.\textsuperscript{68}

The majority in \textit{Brown} relied heavily on the analysis of past Minnesota cases.\textsuperscript{69} The \textit{Brown} case presented unique facts that distinguished it from controlling precedent.\textsuperscript{70} Therefore, the court erred by not delving further into the purpose and scope of the triviality doctrine.\textsuperscript{71}

\textbf{C. Intentional Closures}

The triviality doctrine allows closures which do not undermine the “values served by the Sixth Amendment.”\textsuperscript{72} The values protected by the guarantee are to “1) ensure a fair trial; 2) to remind the prosecutor and judge of their responsibility to the accused and the importance of their functions; 3) to encourage witnesses to come forward; and 4) to discourage perjury.”\textsuperscript{73} The second value is an effective restraint on possible abuse of judicial power.\textsuperscript{74} As Justice Meyers correctly stated in her dissent, an intentional courtroom closure goes against the values protected by the Sixth Amendment. 75

Courts do not agree about the implication of judicial intent for courtroom closures. 76 Some courts have questioned the applicability of Peterson to intentional courtroom closures. 77 A recent case in Florida held that intentionally locking courtroom doors amounted to a partial closure, 78 subject to the less stringent substantial reason test. 79 A partial closure occurs when access to the courtroom is retained by some spectators but denied to others. 80 Though many jurisdictions do recognize the distinction between partial and total closures, 81 Minnesota does not. 82 Locking a courtroom’s doors contravenes the presumption of openness in criminal proceedings. 83 Therefore, regardless of the partial and total closure distinction, “if a court intends to exclude the public from a criminal proceeding, it must first analyze the Waller factors and make specific enough findings with regards to those factors.” 84

The U.S. Supreme Court has been firm in its protection of the public trial guarantee. 85 Any closure by a trial court judge must satisfy the four requirements of the Waller test. 86 The Minnesota Supreme Court’s ruling allows trial courts to ignore the Waller test, so long as the closure is small. 87 The better precedent would be to apply the Waller test to any intentional courtroom closure. 88 It would provide appellate courts a better opportunity to review the case and promote public confidence in the judiciary.\textsuperscript{89}

\textit{D. Brown’s Impact on Future Decisions}

At the end of the public trial section in the \textit{Brown} opinion, the court appears to acknowledge that its new precedent could create the appearance that “Minnesota’s courtrooms are closed or inaccessible to the public.”\textsuperscript{90} Thus, the court draws on the Waller test and requires future closures to have express reasons stated on the record.\textsuperscript{91} But the \textit{Brown} court affirmed the trial court’s decision, which lacked any articulated reason for the closure.\textsuperscript{92} Therefore, the \textit{Brown} decision sets a low threshold for courtroom closures and leaves questions about how future decisions will be addressed.\textsuperscript{93} There is a strong potential that “creeping courtroom closures” may become commonplace in Minnesota courts.\textsuperscript{94} In fact, a recent Minnesota Supreme Court decision relied on \textit{Brown} to uphold a locked courtroom only for the stated reason that “[g]oing in and out [during a proceeding] obviously creates some disruptions and distractions.”\textsuperscript{95}

The better course of action in \textit{Brown} would have been to acknowledge the implication of the public trial guarantee and to remand the case for an evidentiary hearing to further address the issue.\textsuperscript{96} A remand does not necessarily mean that the closure was unconstitutional, as courts have found maintaining order during jury instructions is an important interest.\textsuperscript{97} Rather, a remand sets the precedent that judges are not allowed overbroad discretion to close the courtroom without being subject to the Waller test.⁹⁸

V. Conclusion

The court was presented with the difficult question of determining whether the intentional locking of a courtroom during closing arguments violated the defendant’s Sixth Amendment rights.⁹⁹ The court determined that this was too trivial to be considered a closure and therefore the defendant’s rights were not implicated.¹⁰⁰ The majority failed to analyze the reasons behind the triviality doctrine when it applied it to intentional closures. Though the decision put in checks for future cases, Brown sets a very low standard that could lead to many unwarranted courtroom closures in the future.¹⁰¹

¹ 815 N.W.2d 609 (Minn. 2012).
² Id. at 617-18.
³ Id.
⁴ Id.
⁵ See infra Part II.
⁶ See infra Part III.
⁷ See infra Part IV.
⁸ See infra Part V.

10 Radin, supra note 9, at 389 (“But any feature of the common law was sure to be noted as a merit, especially in the seventeenth century. . . . [I]n the eighteenth century . . . the “open and public trial” of the common law [was given] something of an order of sanctity.”).

11 Id. at 384.

13 Kleinbart v. United States, 388 A.2d 878, 881 (“The guarantee has always been recognized as a safeguard against any attempt to employ our courts as instruments of prosecution.”); Radin, supra note 9, at 386 (“The [Sixth Amendment right to a public trial] is one of the important safeguards that [was] soon deemed necessary to round out the Constitution . . . .” (quoting Davis v. United States, 247 F. 394, 394 (8th Cir. 1917))); Fair Trial Guarantees, 32 C.F.R. § 151.7(p) (2012) (citing public trials as important safeguards to fair trials).

14 U.S. Const. amend. VI; accord Minn. Const. art. I, § 6.

17 E.g., Waller, 467 U.S. at 39; People v. Colon, 71 N.Y.2d 410, 416 (N.Y. 1988).

18 Waller, 467 U.S. at 46. See generally Gerhard O. W. Mueller, Problems Posed by Publicity to Crime and Criminal Proceedings, 110 U. Pa. L. Rev. 1, 1-3 (1961) (discussing the need to balance defendant’s rights to a public trial and the government’s need to maintain secrecy in certain situations).

19 See Davis v. United States, 247 F. 394, 396-98 (8th Cir. 1917) (discussing eleven lower court public trial decisions).

20 Id. at 398-99 (“A violation of the constitutional right [to a public trial] necessarily implies prejudice and more than that need not appear. Furthermore, it would be difficult, if not impossible, in such cases for a defendant to point to any definite, personal injury.”).

21 Id.

22 Waller, 467 U.S. at 50.

23 Id. at 48.
24 Id.

25 Id. at 49-50.

26 Id. at 50. See generally Tom Stacy & Kim Dayton, Rethinking Harmless Constitutional Error, 88 COLUM. L. REV. 79, 113 (1988) (discussing the appropriate remedy for Sixth Amendment violations).

27 See Presley v. Georgia, 558 U.S. 209, 215 (2010) (holding that a trial court’s closure during voir dire violated the defendant’s Sixth Amendment rights because the court did not take into account alternatives and did not articulate a specific enough finding).

28 See, e.g., State v. Mahkuk, 736 N.W.2d 675, 685 (Minn. 2007) (holding that the trial court failed to provide adequate findings for the closure as required by Waller); State v. Fageroos, 531 N.W.2d 199, 203 (Minn. 1995) (remanding the case in order for the prosecutor to have the opportunity to establish, if he could, that closure was necessary under Waller); State v. McRae, 494 N.W.2d 252, 260 (Minn. 1992) (holding that the trial court did not comply with the requirements of Waller).

29 See, e.g., State v. Caldwell, 803 N.W.2d 373, 390 (Minn. 2011) (holding that the values sought to be protected by a public trial are not implicated when some spectators are excluded from the courtroom); State v. Lindsey, 632 N.W.2d 652, 660-61 (Minn. 2001) (holding that the closure in question was so trivial that it did not implicate the right to a public trial).

30 See, e.g., State v. Brown, 815 N.W.2d 609, 618 (Minn. 2012) (quoting Peterson v. Williams, 85 F.3d 39, 42 (2d Cir. 1996)); Caldwell, 803 N.W.2d at 390; Lindsey, 632 N.W.2d at 660-61.

31 Appellant’s Brief at 10, Brown, 815 N.W.2d 609 (No. A10-0992), 2012 WL 8479012 [hereinafter Appellant’s Brief].

32 Id.

33 See Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 614.

34 Id.

35 Id.

36 Id.

37 Id.

38 Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 614.

39 Id.

40 Id.

41 Id. at 614-15.

42 Appellant’s Brief, supra note 34, at 8.

43 Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 615.

44 Id.
45 Id.

46 Id.

47 Id. at 616 (citing State v. Bobo, 770 N.W.2d 129, 139 (Minn. 2009)).

48 Id. at 616-17.

49 Id. at 617.

50 Id.

51 Id.

52 Id. at 617-18 (“[T]he courtroom was never cleared of all spectators . . . . The trial remained open to the public and press already in the courtroom . . . . [T]he jury instructions did not compromise a proportionately large portion of the trial proceedings.”).

53 Id. at 618.

54 Id. at 614.

55 See id. at 627 (Meyer, J., dissenting).

56 Peterson v. Williams, 85 F.3d 29 (2d Cir. 1996).

57 Id. at 42 (protecting the identity of the undercover agent is a valid reason for courtroom closure).

58 Id. (failure to re-open was an oversight).

59 Id. at 41.

60 Id. at 44.
61 Id.

62 See id.

63 See, e.g., United States v. Gupta, 699 F.3d 682, 689 (2d Cir. 2011) (“Whatever the outer boundaries of our “triviality standard” may be . . . we see no reason to define these boundaries . . . .”); Peterson, 85 F.3d at 44. See generally Hon. John M. Walker, Jr., Harmless Error Review in the Second Circuit, 63 BROOK. L. REV. 395, 403-04 (1997) (discussing the different factors that can be used for determining triviality).

64 See Peterson, 85 F.3d at 44.

65 See generally H.D. Warren, Annotation, Exclusion of Public During Criminal Trial, 156 A.L.R. 265 (1945) (discussing triviality cases from different jurisdictions).

66 Gupta, 699 F.3d at 688 (“We have repeatedly emphasized, however, the [triviality] doctrine’s narrow application.”).

67 See State v. Easterling, 157 Wash. 2d 167, 180 (Wash. 2006) (noting that the a majority of the State’s court has never found a public trial right to be de minimis).

68 Case Comment, Criminal Law--Sixth Amendment--Second Circuit Affirms Conviction Despite Closure to the Public of a Voir Dire--U.S. v. Gupta, 125 HARV. L. REV. 1072, 1076 (2012) (finding that in eighteen cases in which a voir dire proceeding was closed to the public but found too trivial to implicate the defendant’s public trial rights, most involved inadvertent closure (citing Gupta, 650 F.3d at 874 (Parker, J., dissenting)).

70 Compare id. (intentionally locking courtroom doors to public not in the courtroom at that time), with State v. Caldwell, 803 N.W.2d 373, 391 (Minn. 2011) (removing the defendant’s mother who had been disruptive throughout the court proceedings), and State v. Lindsey, 632 N.W.2d 652, 657 (removing two minors during criminal trial pursuant to Minnesota law).

71 See Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 626 (Meyer, J., dissenting) (arguing that the majority’s reasoning was flawed and the actions of the Lindsey court were distinguishable).

72 Peterson v. Williams, 85 F.3d 29, 43 (2d Cir. 1996).

73 Id. (citing Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 46-47 (1984)).

74 Waller, 467 U.S. at 46 f.4 (citing In re Oliver, 333 U.S. 257, 270 (1948)).

75 Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 626 (Meyer, J., dissenting) (“[T]he values of the public trial guarantee are sufficiently implicated by the facts of this case such that the Waller analysis is required.”).

76 See, e.g., Gonzalez v. Quinones, 211 F.3d 735, 737 (2d Cir. 2000) (“In Peterson, the problematic closure occurred as the result of the accidental failure to reopen after a properly ordered closure, where as here the door was intentionally locked by court personnel. . . [I]n view of these differences, we do not believe the closure can be considered trivial . . .

(“Some courts do consider whether the closure was inadvertent. Other courts find this irrelevant to the analysis.”); Kelly v. State, 6 A.3d 396, 407 f.10 (Md. 2010)

(“[The closure] was neither brief nor inadvertent, but was an intentional restriction . . . . Under these circumstances, the appropriate relief is the granting of a new trial.”). But see Walton v. Briley, 361 F.3d 431, 433 (7th Cir. 2004) (“Whether the closure was intentional or inadvertent is constitutionally irrelevant.”); State v. Vanness, 738 N.W.2d 154, 158 (Wis. Ct. App. 2007) (holding that the State’s intent is irrelevant, so when the courthouse was locked for three hours without the judge’s knowledge, it was still a closure).

77 See Brown v. Kuhlmann, 142 F.3d 529, 541 (2d Cir. 1998) (“It is unclear from the analysis in Peterson whether [the intentional closing] would alter the conclusion that no Sixth Amendment violation occurred.”); Peterson, 85 F.3d at 44 f.8 (questioning whether an intentional closure may threaten a defendant’s public trial right, even if the closure is brief).

78 See United States v. Flanders, 845 F.Supp. 2d 1298, 1302 (S.D. Fla. 2012)

(holding that locking courtroom during closing arguments was a partial closure).

79 United States v. Sherlock, 962 F.2d 1349, 1357 (9th Cir. 1989) (“[T]he impact of the partial closure did not reach the level of a total closure, and therefore “only a ‘substantial’ rather than a ‘compelling’ reason for the closure was necessary.”

(quoting Douglas v. Wainwright, 739 F.2d 531, 533 (11th Cir. 1984))).

80 Judd v. Haley, 250 F.3d 1308, 1314 (11th Cir. 2001).

81 See, e.g., United States v. Smith, 426 F.3d 567, 571 (2d Cir. 2005); Nieto v. Sullivan, 87 F.2d 743, 754 (10th Cir. 1989); Com v. Cohen, 921 N.E.2d 906, 921 (Mass. 2010).

82 State v. Mahkuk, 736 N.W.2d 675, 685 (Minn. 2007).

84 United States v. Gupta, 699 F.3d 682, 687 (2d Cir. 2011).

85 Presley v. Georgia, 558 U.S. 209, 214-15 (2010) (explicitly holding that “trial courts are required to consider alternatives” and “make every reasonable measure to accommodate the public.”).

86 Gupta, 699 F.3d at 684-85 (“Because the lower court here did not analyze the Waller factors prior to closing the courtroom, the closure was unjustified.”).

87 See State v. Brown, 815 N.W.2d 609, 618-19 (discussing the factors which made the closure too trivial too implicate the defendant’s rights).

88 Gupta, 699 F.3d at 687 (“If a trial court fails to adhere to [the Waller test], any intentional closure is unjustified . . . .”).

89 Compare Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 618 (aiming to maintain confidence in the judiciary and facilitate appellate review), with Gupta, 699 F.3d at 689 (knowledge that anyone is free to attend a trial inspires confidence), and Levitas, supra note 12, at 510-11 (noting that the elements of Waller create a “suitable record for appellate review.”).

90 Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 618.

91 Compare id. (“To facilitate appellate review in future cases, we conclude the better practice is for the trial court to expressly state on the record why the court is locking the courtroom doors.”), with Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 45 (1984) (“The interest [for the courtroom closure] is to be articulated along with findings specific enough that a reviewing court can determine whether the closure order was properly entered.”).

92 Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 618 (stating on the record that it was “for the benefit of those in the back”).

95 Id. at *12.

96 See Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 627 (Meyer, J., dissenting) (arguing that the appropriate disposition was remand for an evidentiary hearing).
Cf. United States v. Flanders, 845 F.Supp. 2d 1298, 1302 (2012) (preventing the distraction of members of the jury by the public coming in and out of the courtroom is an important government interest).

23 Minn. Prac., Trial Handbook for Minn. Lawyers § 2.14 (2012 ed.) (“The appropriate initial remedy for an inadequate record to justify closing a trial is remand for an evidentiary hearing.” (citing State v. Fageroos, 531 N.W.2d 199 (Minn. 2005))).

Brown, 815 N.W.2d at 615.

Id. at 618.

Silvernail, 2013 WL 2364094, at *13 f.1 (“[D]uring the 2011-2012 term, [the Minnesota Supreme Court] denied five petitions for review that challenged the district court’s decision to close or lock the door during final jury instructions.”).