

The Big Ten Law Schools present

Rule of Law in 2025

International Law and U.S. Threats to Sovereignty

Wednesday, April 16, 2025 | 2-3 p.m. PT/4-5 p.m. CT/5-6 p.m. ET

Join virtually: go.unl.edu/ruleoflaw

Panelists:

Karima Bennoune, Lewis M. Simes Professor of Law, University of Michigan Law School

Jean-Marc Coicaud, Distinguished Professor of Law and Global Affairs, Rutgers Law School

Adil Haque, Professor of Law and Judge Jon O. Newman Scholar, Rutgers Law School

Brian Lepard, Harold W. Conroy Distinguished Professor of Law, University of Nebraska College of Law

Moderator:

Sarah Dadush, Professor of Law, Rutgers Law School

The Big Ten law schools have coordinated a series of virtual panel discussions that examine the Rule of Law in 2025 after an unprecedented series of executive orders, legal interpretations, and administrative actions by the Trump administration over the last several months. Distinguished panelists will present a broad range of perspectives and nuanced views on the rule of law during a period of constitutional, legal, and governmental recalibration.

Upcoming presentations:

April 23 | Rule of Law and Separation of Powers, Part III: Executive Authority to Enforce the Laws

April 30 | Diversity, Equity, Inclusion and Belonging as part of the First Amendment and Academic Freedom

May 7 | Citizenship and Immigration

May 14 | What is the “Rule of Law”?

May 21 | The States’ Role in Protecting the Rule of Law

May 28 | Judicial and Presidential Dismantling of Administrative Capacity

BIG

Rutgers Law School

MICHIGAN LAW
UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

COLLEGE OF LAW